Changes, Challenges, Growth Define Agriculture In 2001

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — This is a year people of agriculture can be proud of.

As we discard the final pages of our 2001 calendars, we can reflect on the joys and trials of the year.

And what a year it was — worry over the potential outbreak of foot and mouth, a devastating prospect for livestock managers; the worst drought and the driest months on record for the state; concerns about protecting our nation's food supply from pathogens; and the horrific realities that, as Americans on September 11, we were all at risk.

But the good news was inherent in the year, also, with more farm preservation efforts than ever before; with the wonderful expansion, now under way, of the Farm Show Complex; and with reader-directed improvements and expansion to Lancaster Farming to streamline news to more than 50,000 readers each week.

January

Again, agriculture opened the [illegible] year with the Farm Show. Amidst the standard whirling snows and sleety rains, the state's major agricultural showcase must, and did, go on. Approximately 4,000 head of animals competed in the event. Also new was a major farm equipment display in the main exhibit hall.

Lebanon Countian Renee Blatt clinched a national title when she was named American Honey Queen at the American Beekeeping Federation convention in San Diego, Calif.

February

In the month's beginning, Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes placed a moratorium on planting of plum pox virus-susceptible trees or shrubs in quarantine zones in Adams and Cumberland counties.

With the unveiling of the Pennsylvania budget, agriculture received an increase of more than $4.1 million for programs related to agriculture.

Pennsylvania's farmland preservation efforts were recognized by the American Farmland Trust as the national leader in farmland preservation with more farmland preserved than LOGANVILLE (York Co.) — In these days of increasing development and industrial growth, consolidation, and value-added, convenience-driven lifestyles, the family farm is under increasing pressure to be profitable.

A [illegible] avenue of increasing the profit margin is to sell products directly to the public, an idea advanced by the Pennsylvania Retail Farm Market Association (PaFarm).

This organization, along with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Penn State extension, will host the 2002 Mid-Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference (MADMC) Feb. 20-23 at the Holidome and Conference Center, York. Direct marketing organizations from Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, Virginia, and Delaware sponsor the conference. Each state takes turns hosting the conference.

"What Direction Are You Headed?" is the theme of the Area ponds may soon carry the familiar "swoosh" sounds of ice skates. Plunging temperatures provide some signs of the winter season, which signals the state's big event — Farm Show. Next week's issue will include our extensive Farm Show preview. The photographer took this midweek at Nolt's Pond at Spruce Street and Kinzer Avenue in New Holland, a favorite "rink" for town visitors. We hope all our readers have a truly happy New Year! Photo by Andy Andrews, editor

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity was light and unaggressive following the holiday as dealers assessed the market and attempted to keep inventories in close balance during this seasonally slow period. Offerings of breast items were readily available, with sharp discounting occasionally noted where product was older and had become difficult to place. Dark meat cuts were at least adequate, although, legs were mixed ranging balanced to adequate. Wings were at least sufficient. Movement through retail and distributive channels was generally no better than fair, with spot refill and feature activity offering the best draw. The market tone was barely steady on bone-in breasts, cautiously steady on the balance.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Report Supplied By USDA

Grain and soybean bids were lower today with very little positive news to offer support. Export inspection figures were low for all commodities except soybeans. Wheat 1 to 5 cents lower. Corn steady to 4 cents lower. Sorghum 5 to 6 cents lower. Soybeans 4 to 8 cents lower.

Wheat bids fell slightly lower due to technical selling on the Boards.

Export inspection numbers were within trade guesses but not good enough to underpin bids. Cold temperatures have moved into winter wheat growing areas but there is no snow cover for protection against any severe conditions.

Corn and soybean bids fell sharply lower, pressured by dry weather in Argentina's growing areas. Poor inspection figures were reported for corn but soybean numbers were better than expected.

Grains inspected for export for week ended 12/20/01: Wheat totaled 18.9 million bushels down 3.2, corn 28.2 down 4.0, sorghum 8.1 up 2.9 million and soybeans 43.3 up 19.4 million bushels compared to a week ago. Year to Date: Wheat totaled 578.0 down 54.0, corn 531.2 down 73.4, sorghum 72.5 up 9.5 and soybeans 445.0 up 50.7. Crop marketing years begin June 1 for wheat and September 1 for corn, sorghum, and soybeans.

EXPORT SALES: PURCHASER COMMODITY TONNAGE DELIVERY DATE Nothing new to report.

THESE MAY NOT BE THE ONLY EXPORT SALES THAT HAVE TRANSPIRED, BUT THEY ARE THE ONLY SALES THAT COULD BE CONFIRMED BY USDA GRAIN MARKET NEWS.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

DEC. 31, 2001–JAN. 6, 2002

NEW YEAR'S EVE, DEC. 31

WATER OVER THE DAM

The year 2001, regarded by many as the first year in the new millennium, is now water over the dam. On January 2, 2002, however, we can celebrate our relations with Canada. Since January 2, 1929, Canada and the United States have both honored their original agreement to preserve Niagara Falls, really two waterfalls that flow between southeastern Ontario and western New York State. The Horseshoe, or Canadian, Falls are 158 feet high, and the American Falls are 167 feet high. Goat Island separates the two. In 1848, the Falls briefly dried up for the first time in recorded history. Strong winds formed an ice jam on Lake Erie near Buffalo, New York, and blocked the flow of water along Niagara River. Local townspeople were able to explore the riverbed, turning up artifacts from the War of 1812, among other things.

Nature will have her course.

TIP OF THE WEEK

BLUE-CHEESE DIP

4 ounces cream cheese
1/4 cup minced parsley
2 tablespoons margarine
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil
2 teaspoons minced fresh rosemary
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon chopped fresh thyme
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1-1/2 ounces blue cheese

Combine all ingredients except blue cheese, and process or whip until smooth, stirring in the blue cheese at the end. Refrigerate and serve on crackers, or add to a baked potato.

Makes 1 cup

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

In January if the sun appear, March and April will pay full dear

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.6296-1.7610. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.6033-1.7741 mostly 1.6428-1.6822.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: 1.0000-1.0800; Class III - spot prices - .9800-1.0600.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - In 0, Out 86; last week - In 23, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 0.

The base price for Class I milk for January 2002 is $11.96 per cwt., down $0.02 from December. Class I differentials specific to each order are added to the base price to determine the Class I price. The Class II skim milk price for January is $7.74, down eleven cents from December. Milk production is steady in most parts of the region, but it is showing signs of increasing in the southern-most states. Fluid milk supplies are heavy and manufacturing plants are operating at or very near capacity levels. Contacts noted that this was the worst milk-handling holiday in the last 3-5 years, but the Tuesday holiday may have had more to do with that than the milk volumes. Some plant contacts noted that were swamped with milk, but able to work through the volumes. However, some operations still have trucks "in the yard" waiting to be unloaded. Some of these "horizontal silos" were still be waiting to unloaded at midweek. Bottled milk sales are sluggish and the school pipelines won't start being refilled until this coming weekend. This week, Florida handlers shipped 80+ loads out of state for processing. A Christmas-weekend snowstorm dumped more than two feet of snow on parts of New York and farm pick-ups and over-the-road transportation were disrupted in the affected areas.

The condensed skim market tone and prices are unchanged. Demand for wet solids is slower which is forcing more skim through local dryers.

The fluid cream market remains weak and supplies are excessive. Atypically, cream prices moved higher during the week of Christmas. This is keeping some Class II buyers away from the spot market until prices reach what they feel is a more attractive level. Demand is slow to fair as many users have reduced operating schedules during the holidays. Ice cream output is seasonally slow, but should get back "up to speed" the second week of January. Bottled cream packaging is slower as orders have, for the most part, been filled. Egg nog production is slowing along seasonal patterns now that most orders have been shipped. Churning activity was heavy at those Eastern operations that are able to make butter. Excess cream volumes are heavy and quite a few loads are clearing to Midwestern outlets. Most sales to butter makers occurred at prices well below the Class II range and most prices are based on the CME price, date of delivery.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Dec. 21. Receipts: This week 125,800; last week 220,300; year ago 103,400. Compared to last week, yearling feeder steers and heifers traded steady to 3.00 lower, with calves trading steady to 4.00 higher, with instances in the Southeast up to 5.00 higher according to the USDA's Livestock Market News Service. Receipts across the country were seasonally lower as sale barns prepare to shut the doors for the Holiday break. Cold weather, and the years first severe winter storms were the talk at most small town cafes to start off the week. Wind breaks were being slapped up on wheat pastures, and feedlot managers were preparing for knee deep mud and fixin' to take a hit on gains and performance. The CME even joined in with the weathermen and the board saw limit up gains in live and feeder cattle pits. This "forecasting" was silenced by Wednesday as weathermen did what they do best by backing out on their "the big one is coming" forecasts, opting rather to broadcast a chance of light rain or snow for the Southern Plains through the Texas panhandle over the weekend. The futures board was on a roller coaster ride throughout the week from limit up gains early in the week, back to double digit losses midweek, and closing out the week with triple digit gains on Friday, with many keeping their eye on nearby live February's premium to cash. The Southern Plains is in need of a drink as a majority of wheat pasture conditions remain very short, with a few exceptions coming from those areas lucky enough to catch some rain at the right times. Farmers and backgrounders in areas with moisture report good wheat pasture conditions and in return keep stoking the fire underneath a stocker calf market that has held up well in the face of a falling feeder cattle market. Order buyers are keeping producers that have some wheat busy stringing wire as they send loads of furry calves from the Northern states that will fit the bill in grazing operations. Heavy rains fell in areas of the Southeast this past weekend resulting in lowered auction receipts. Localized flooding was reported making many country roads impassable, leaving some producers hoping to get their calf crop on this years' income statement at home shaking their heads.

Packer buyers hid in the brush most of the week finally pulling the trigger late Thursday in all feeding areas with live sales losing another 1.00 in the South, trading at mostly 62.00. The Northern Plains ended 1.00 to 2.00 lower, trading at mostly 100.00 on a dressed basis. Although we end the year sitting down to a dinner that is not likely to consist of prime rib, beef demand appears to be remaining good as we head into a new year. From everyone here at the Livestock Market News office we wish you a Merry Christmas.

OPINION

Be Careful With Leasing

Several readers have apprised us of a situation where new farmers have signed documents to lease cows.

While leasing has its benefits to new and beginning farmers, please be aware of the "fine print." In many cases, some unfortunate dairy producers sign their way into some hidden clauses, many of which can include the equivalent of "loan sharking." Some of the lease agreements demand 36 percent return on the leased animals!

In one case, three young boys in their 30s and 40s signed dairy animal leasing agreements — and those rates can be quite costly. They didn't read the lease. Some hidden charges were present in the agreements.

When in doubt about a lease agreement, don't sign up! Instead, take it to an extension agent who understands leasing. Some of these agreements shouldn't have been signed unless looked over by an attorney.

With any leasing agreement, don't forget to read the fine print. Start the fiscal year right and read every line of the agreement. And remember — you're not indebted to sign anything you don't completely agree with.

To Celebrate New Year With Your Family

The beginning of a New Year is a great time to stop and reflect on the blessings we have enjoyed in the past year. Some of us have had more trials than others in 2001 but we all have things for which to be thankful. Some have enjoyed health and well-being while others have experienced health problems. Some of us have experienced business success and some ventures have failed. However we live in a land where we have the opportunity to start over if we have experienced setbacks.

While you are reflecting on your past year's activities, evaluate with your family whether your business activities supported your family goals or made it hard to reach them. If the consensus is that changes are needed, begin to explore what alternatives are available that could better meet both your financial needs and your personal goals. If you have some ideas on new ventures you want to explore, seek some help in developing your plans.

The "Tilling the Soil of Opportunity" seminar is a great opportunity to learn about developing a business plan for starting a new business.

To Enroll In "Tilling The Soil Of Opportunity"

Tilling the Soil of Opportunity is a multisession program (12 weeks in length), providing farmers/agribusinesses or anyone working in food or the green industry with the skills to reinvent their enterprises.

Business planning, marketing research, and financial management skills are a few of the concrete tools taught by certified extension educators and local business experts. Using proven adult learning techniques and a curriculum tailored to the unique needs of Pennsylvania agriculture, participants will evaluate their business ideas and complete business plans for a banker's review.

The program is designed to help a broad range of small- to mid-sized farmers, food processors, distributors, retailers, food professionals, and others working in the agriculture sector. Owners and managers of new and existing businesses are encouraged to participate. If you have a business dream or goal that you would like to make happen, this program can help make those visions a reality.

If you're thinking about beginning a business and searching innovative ideas about how to start an enterprise, this program will assist you in getting to your goal. You will learn how to organize and develop a professional business plan to make that business dream come true.

The program is offered in three locations once a week from January through April. The program is offered on Tuesday evenings in Lancaster County at the Garden Spot High School in New Holland. It is also offered on Monday evenings for Lebanon and Dauphin counties at the Milton Hershey School in Hershey. It is offered in Adams County at the Adams County Agriculture Center in Gettysburg on Tuesday mornings.

For more information and to register, call Ed Herrmann at the Lebanon County Extension Office (717) 270-4391. If you wish to register, call promptly, since classes start the first full week of January.

In the meantime, start off the New Year by supporting the livestock and horticultural industries by enjoying a hearty meal of pork, sauerkraut, and mashed potatoes!

To Operate Skid-Steer Loaders Safely

Skid-steer loaders put workers at risk of rollover and runover incidents. If you operate or work near skid-steer loaders, take these steps to protect yourself.

Always work with the seat belt fastened and the restraint bar in place. Load, unload, and turn on level ground when possible. Travel and turn with the bucket in the lowest position possible and do not travel across slopes. Travel straight up or down a slope with the heavy end of the machine pointed uphill. Keep bystanders away from the work area and never disable safety devices.

In order to enter and exit from the loader safely, follow these guidelines. Enter the loader only when the bucket is flat on the ground or when the lift-arm supports are in place. When entering the loader, face the seat and keep a three-point contact with handholds and steps. Never use foot or hand controls for steps or handholds. Before leaving the operator's seat, lower the bucket flat to the ground, set the parking brake, and turn off the engine.

It is important to maintain the machine in a safe operating condition. Keep the foot controls free of mud, ice, snow, and debris. Regularly inspect and maintain the interlocked controls, safety belts, restraint bars, side screens, and Rollover Protection Structures (ROPS). Never modify or bypass safety devices and, if you must perform service under a raised bucket, use the lift-arm supports.

To order a complete copy of the NIOSH Alert on skid-steer loaders, visit their Webpage at http:/www.cdc.gov/niosh or call (800) 356-4674.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor,

I like Lancaster Farming, but I never read anything about the evils of NAFTA and free trade.

This is what is helping to ruin the farming business for many. How can our farmers compete with the foreign imports? And what about the many manufacturers who went out of business or moved their business production and assembly to a foreign country where labor is $.50 to $1.50 per hour and there is no OSHA?

This is what we would need Congress to address and repeal. Spend some time on educating the people of the U.S. on this and urge them to ask Congress to repeal NAFTA and free trade.

Dave Haldeman
Douglassville

Editor:

As the Senate Farm Bill hangs in limbo, Pennsylvania Dairy Policy Development Committee of Family Farm Defenders (PDPDC of FFD) would like to thank Congressman Don Sherwood and Senator Arlen Specter for their continued support of price stabilizing legislation for dairy farmers. Sen. Rick Santorum, however, has come down squarely against any price stability for dairy farmers. His comments aired on Radio Pennsylvania Network on Dec. 4 clearly expressed his opposition to the original Senate Farm Bill dairy language.

The proposed legislation authored by Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT) is sometimes referred to as The National Dairy Trust Fund. This legislation would set the class I mover at $14.25 per

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHO IS THE SERVANT?

Background Scripture:
Isaiah 43:1-79.
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 42:1-9.

The words "servant" and "servants" occur 877 times in the RSV Bible, indicating "one who is at the disposal or service of another," either in bondage, employment, or even voluntarily. Some times, however, significant persons are referred to as "the servant of the Lord" and God speaks of "my servant Israel." When we come to Isaiah, there are 24 references to "servant" and often it is not crystal clear to whom the prophet is referring.

Early on it appears that the servant is the nation of Israel. But, in time, Isaiah seems to speak, not of the whole nation, but of the remnant that remains faithful and responsive to the Lord, the Israel within Israel. In Isaiah 43, we begin to suspect that sometime he is referring to the remnant Israel and sometimes to a specific person.

Some 500 years later, Jesus identified himself with this servant. So, we've solved the problem of "Who is the servant?" No, not entirely — but we will return to that question later.

Isaiah 42 begins boldly: "Behold my servant, whom I uphold, my chosen in whom my soul delights." The servant here is neither a slave nor an employee, but one whom God has called to a vocation, for a mission. God is the initiator and also the one who empowers the servant: "I have put my spirit upon him." God never gives anyone a mission without providing the proper equipment.

Bring Forth Justice

The servant's mission: "... he will bring forth justice to the nations." Notice: the mission is not to spread their religion nor to send armies to bring all nations under Israelite rule. The word translated here as "justice," mishpat, is difficult to define but, from the 8th century BC prophets onward, it is obvious that the concept includes honesty, fairness, and concern for the powerless.

Often, when the word "justice" is used, people think of the punishment of the guilty. Yes, that is part of justice, but if punishment is the focus, then justice is simply "vengeance dressed up in Sunday clothes."

Numerius, a former Roman governor, was charged with embezzlement. But he denied the charge and, although greatly suspected, could not be convicted. Exasperated, the judge, Delfidius, cried out, "Can anyone, most mighty Caesar, ever be found guilty if it be enough to deny the charge?" To which Julian relied: "Can anyone be proved innocent if it be enough to have accused him?"

I believe our judicial system is probably the best in the world, yet it still falls far short of Biblical justice. If a poor man and a rich man are accused of the same crime, the latter's chances of getting off are almost infinitely better than those of the former. When did you last find a millionaire on death row? The Minneapolis Tribune reports that when a certain Texas judge instructed a jury to return a verdict of "guilty" in a car theft case, the jury foreman dutifully replied: "We find the innocent man that stole the car guilty"!

Spiritual Power

Our Constitution speaks of justice before it mentions liberty and the Declaration of Independence proclaims: "all men are created equal." That does not mean equality in endowment or moral worth, but equality before the law. Many of the Hebrew prophets sum up the mission of Israel as correcting the injustices visited upon the poor and weak.

So the aim of the mission is to "bring forth justice," but there is a method that is also part of the mission: "He will not cry or lift up his voice, or make it heard in the street; a bruised reed he will not break, and a dimly burning wick he will not quench; he will faithfully bring forth justice" (42:2,3). The servant therefore will not enforce it with a sword, but with the light of example.

"I have given you as ... a light to the nations ..." (v. 7). He will exercise his power in a quiet and unassuming manner. It is natural that we associate this "servant" with Jesus Christ. That was his style and method.

Who is the servant? First Israel, then the remnant, then Jesus Christ — and now us!

For Manheim Grower, Difference Is In The Details

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The key is finding the limiting factor.

When Dwight Rohrer speaks of his approach to successful crop management, the discussion may sound like a bit of a science lesson.

Rohrer's management techniques have helped him win the top corn yield contest in the Pennsylvania shelled corn class in 2000. Additionally he had the highest soybean yields in Pennsylvania in 1996. He has participated in local yield contests since he began farming in 1997.

Most recently, he began entering the statewide contest for the past four years. Prior to that he had entered the local Manheim Young Farmer's yield contest. Rohrer is also planning on entering the upcoming national contest.

"I'm a fairly competitive person," he said. "That's probably why I participate in the field contests. I learn a lot, too." Exchanging information about what worked this season or what other producers are experimenting with provides essential help, said Rohrer.

"I don't enter just to win," he said. "My goal is to be able to evaluate myself against other producers. Contests allow farmers to compare themselves to growers in their area.

"Contests show me where I'm at," he said. "In farm management your goal should be to maintain production in the top 10 percent of the industry, so competition allows me to evaluate that. I also see what I can learn from what other producers are doing," he said.

Crop Management

With 65 acres on his farm, Rohrer finds it necessary to maximize production. "We just try to do the best with what we have," he said.

Since there is no underground or nearby water source available for irrigation, water is his "most limiting factor."

"The general principle in any crop is that the producer needs to find what the limiting factor is and manage that the best they can," he said. "In this area, rainfall is the limiting factor, and I work to make sure that moisture is the only limiting factor of my yield, because that's the only part I can't control." Factors such as seed, fertilizer, and most pests can be managed, explained Rohrer.

"I try to buy good seed, make sure the corn doesn't run out of nutrients, and make sure there is no insect pressure or soil compaction issue to deal with to limit production."

As for advice for other crop growers, "don't worry about rain," he said. "Do the best you can with what you have, and don't worry about the rest."

One technique he uses to maximize moisture is to intentionally deep-till in the fall to create vertical channels for water to filter.

"I've found that erosion is lower in those fields with

Improving Corn Silage

Harvest Timing

This is my first Between the Rows since I left last September for a six-month visit to the Miner Institute in northern New York to study corn silage and dairy cows. After going through another silage harvest here with my Miner experience under my belt, I thought a few comments on silage harvesting might be in order.

My hosts at Miner, Ev Thomas and Dr. Charlie Sniffen, continually reinforced to me the idea that to make milk, cows need good and consistent forage quality from both hay crops and corn silage. The Miner staff conducted a survey of active farms a few years back in their area and found that there is a wide range of corn silage quality being fed, dispelling the idea that "silage is silage."

There are many factors that influence silage quality, but perhaps the biggest one is the timing of harvest. Harvesting too late is especially devastating. Late-harvested silage (greater than 40 percent DM) generally has lower fiber digestibility, harder kernels, less sugar, and slightly lower yields than that harvested in the desired moisture range. It also packs less well and is more subject to yeast and molds. All of these factors could result in two pounds less production per cow, translating into a $10,000 loss annually on a 100-cow herd.

Even though we all realize the issues with harvesting

Chad Rhoads, Danville, Ind., purchased this foundation female for $4,000. The proceeds from the sale of this gilt will go into the NJSA Scholarship Fund. In February 2002, four NJSA members will be rewarded for their outstanding efforts in the swine industry with the first-ever NJSA scholarships.

Cattle feeders with questions and concerns regarding recent changes in Pennsylvania's beef packing industry, should plan to attend the annual Lancaster Cattle Feeder's Day.

Scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 29 at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center, the event will feature information presented by procurement personnel regarding Smithfield Food's acquisition of Moyer Packing in Souderton. Pending completion of Excel's agreement with Taylor Packing in Wyalusing, plans are for Excel representatives to also participate in this educational event.

Cattle Feeder's Day will also include presentations related to custom feeding, economics, and crop insurance.

Winter Feed Requirements Of Beef Cows

Following are three basic rules to evaluate the feed requirements of beef cows during the winter, according to Dr. John Comerford, Penn State Extension beef specialist.

1. Maintenance energy requirements increase by about one percent for each 1°F. below 32°F. The energy for maintenance for beef cows in the last ⅓ of pregnancy is about 11 megacalories per day. With an air temperature in dry air and no wind of 22°F., this means there is a 10 percent greater energy requirement. This 1.1 megacalories of energy needed is equivalent to about one pound of corn or two pounds of orchardgrass hay.

2. The rule for accounting for wind chill is to use the wind chill temperature to adjust feed energy. For example, if the wind chill is zero°F., then the cow requires 32 percent more energy. This is about three pounds of corn or five to six pounds of orchardgrass hay.

3. The most serious condition is when the animal gets wet because the hair and hide lose their insulation capacity. The rule to use when the cattle are wet is to use 59°F. as the starting point and change the feed needs by two percent for each degree below 59°F. For example, if the cattle are wet and the wind chill is 9°F., the energy requirement is 100 percent higher. This is equivalent to feeding an additional 20 pounds of corn or 40 pounds of hay to a cow each day. Obviously, most cows could not consume enough feed to keep them at maintenance under these conditions, so they will start losing body condition. A windbreak or shelter from the rain is economically feasible as well as good animal husbandry.

New Swine Finishing Barn

Several 2,000 head finishing barns recently constructed in Pennsylvania provide open housing for pigs, and nearly eliminate labor associated with sorting hogs for market. These "self-sorting" barns contain four large pens housing approximately 500 pigs each. Large pens containing many pigs reduce fighting and social competition common to pigs housed in smaller groups.

Gates separate a small section of each pen into a feeding area. For pigs to reach the feeding area, they must travel through a set of automatic scales. After eating at the automatic feeding stations, pigs return to the loafing area via a one-way gate. As pigs approach market weight, the scale computer individually weighs each pig as it enters the feeding area. If the pig exceeds the minimum weight for slaughter, the exit gate from the scale directs the pig into a "sorted" pen of pigs heavy enough for slaughter. Pigs that do not exceed the minimum weight enter the feeding area as usual.

Sorted pigs can then be loaded onto trucks with minimal time and labor.

An additional potential advantage to the system is to have the scales track the number of pigs within 10 to 15 pounds of the minimum weight. This information could be used to estimate how many hogs would be available for slaughter the following week.

Eliminating Scrapie

Recently, the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture announced an important new program to accelerate the eradication of the fatal brain disease, scrapie, from the nation's sheep flocks and goat herds.

Scrapie is a fatal, degenerative disease affecting the central nervous system. An abnormal protein, called a prion, is associated with the disease. Transmission primarily occurs at lambing/kidding through exposure of a ewe's/doe's offspring and other animals to an infected female's birth fluids and placenta; thus the emphasis placed on breeding animals in the eradication program.

Scrapie is in a class of diseases known as transmissible spongiform encephalopathies (TSEs). Other diseases in this class include bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) in cattle and Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD) in deer and elk. Recent publicity surrounding TSEs, and limited knowledge about these diseases, has heightened public concern. Extensive epidemiological research has shown no evidence that scrapie can be transmitted to humans.

In order to eradicate scrapie among sheep and goats, methods for identifying infected and exposed animals must be created. Therefore, sheep and goats not enrolled in the Voluntary Scrapie Flock Certification Program (VSFCP) will be subject to new identification requirements before they change ownership and/or enter into interstate commerce.

The following animals will need ear tags or tattoos: All sheep 18 months and older; all breeding sheep; all scrapie exposed, suspect, test-positive and high-risk animals; breeding goats, except low-risk commercial goats; and all sheep and goats for exhibition. For the 2002 Pennsylvania Farm Show, officials will not expect sheep to bear official USDA ear tags.

As for the identification process, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) will provide ear tags, without charge, to producers. Tags will be available through the USDA Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), Veterinary Services (VS Area Office and/or the State Veterinarian's office in each state). Metal ear tags are preferred because of their low cost and durability; however, plastic ear tags may be provided when requested.

Sheep producers who prefer to use a different type of tag may purchase official tags through specified, approved tag companies. A list of approved tag companies and tag types will be maintained on the APHIS scrapie web page, www.aphis.usda.gov/vs/scrapie.

Producers will be required to keep identification records for five years after the animal has left the flock/herd.

In addition to official identification, each breeding sheep or goat crossing state lines or entering into interstate commerce must be accompanied by an official Certificate of Veterinary Inspection (health certificate) issued by an accredited veterinarian.

The American Sheep Industry Association estimates that scrapie costs the industry over $20 million each year in lost export sales, disposal costs for offal, and lost productivity. Even though research studies have shown that scrapie is not a public health risk, public perception may one day dictate eradication of all TSEs. Therefore, it is in the industry's best interest to eliminate scrapie in the U.S.

For more information regarding scrapie eradication in Pennsylvania, call (717) 782-3442 or (610) 944-5962.

Winter Care For Horses

According to Dr. Ann Swinker, Penn State Extension equine specialist, neglect is the worse thing that happens to a horse during the winter months. Most horses are turned out to pasture and we only see them in the dark at feeding time. In the summer months, it is easy to provide loving care for the horse, when we are riding every day and want to make certain the horse is fit and in good health.

About the worst thing for a horse during the winter months is ice; most importantly, the ice that covers the watering trough or water bucket. Water for the horse during cold weather is too often overlooked. The water may freeze up making it inaccessible to the horse. Mature horses need about 10 gallons of water a day. To keep the horse healthy during freezing weather owners should make sure an ample supply of fresh water is always available. Excessively cold water will decrease the horses' consumption of water. Ideally, water should be maintained at a temperature of 40°F.

When the horse drinks less water, feed intake will decrease. A reduction in feed intake results in less energy being available to maintain body temperature and body weight during the cold months. Reduced feed and water intake could lead to colic and an impacted intestinal tract in the horse.

To help prevent water consumption problems in the winter, water should be made as accessible to the horse as possible. Heated waterers are one way to assure your horse an ample supply of drinking water. If electric water heaters are used, the water tank should be checked every day to insure that the heater is not shorting out and shocking the horse. An electric shock would prevent the horse from drinking.

ASHLAND, Ohio — The AHR Fall Sale was conducted Oct. 25-27 in Ashland, Ohio. This, our 14th annual fall sale, was a good indication of how our Haflinger breed is growing. In 1988 the first fall sale under the old HRNA, conducted in Coshocton, Ohio, had 68 head consigned. This sale had all ages with consignments pouring in until we had a total of 452 catalogued.

Out of 452 catalogued Haflingers there were 57 'outs.' Total Haflingers sold was 395. The overall average price was $1,770.70 each. The sale topper was a 2-year-old Holland import consigned by John Dunkel and Gerald or Bonnie Thomas from Marion, Ind., selling for $11,500 to Bill Little from Pelham, N.H. Her name was "B-Eva Van De Boukemahof."

The second and third high selling mares were consigned by Kevin Heintz from Wayland, Mich.: "Dandy-Line," selling for $10,000 to George and Brenda Macomber from Manchester, Mich. and "Shalamar," selling for $8,200 to Kim Spann from Phoenix, Ariz.

John and Judy Miller of New Trend Farm from Ft. Johnson, N.Y. consigned the top weanling filly. Six thousand four hundred dollars made Dirk and Karen Young of Shaneateles, N.Y. the new owners.

Three other weanling fillies sold for $6,000 or more. The top stallion, "A Divident NTF," a 3-year-old consigned by Scott and Dottie Boeving of Wingate, N.C. went to J.D. Inabinett of Landrum, S.C. for $7,300.

The second highest selling stallion was a 2-year-old named "A Royal Ruckus RAH" and was consigned by N. Slabach, S. Schlabach, and A. Holmes of Millersburg, Ind. and sold to R.J. Haflingers of Salesville, Ohio for $7,200.

The top weanling stallion sold for $3,500, again from Kevin Heintz of Wayland, Mich., to Chris Clemson from Chardon, Ohio.

Scott and Dottie Boeving of Wingate, N.C. consigned the top gelding. His name is "Abraham's Armor CRB" selling for $4,800 to Dan Hanna of Round Valley Horse Ranch, Eager, Ariz.

Haflingers went to 25 states and two Canadian Provinces.

The averages were as follows: 71 geldings, weanlings and older, averaged $1,728.52; 23 1-year and older stallions averaged $2,254.35; 86 weanling stallions averaged $722.10; 149 1-year-old and older mares averaged $2,664.50; and 66 weanling fillies averaged $1,630.

ROCK HILL, S.C. — The American Youth Horse Council's 25th National Youth Horse Leader's Symposium will be held at the Rock Hill Holiday Inn in Rock Hill, S.C.

This 25th anniversary event brings together youth leaders from all riding disciplines to share their collective voices and help shape the equine industry. The symposium attracts leaders from breed associations, equine sport organizations, extension service, universities, and the crucially important "hands-on" youth leaders from such groups as 4-H, U.S. Pony Club, National High School Rodeo, FFA, and many more.

Symposium events begin Friday evening and run throughout the weekend with roundtable discussions, lecture-style presentations, live horse demonstrations, and trade show exhibits.

Livestock Ledger

The horse has two natural defenses against cold, a long hair coat and a layer of fat beneath the skin. Both provide an excellent means of insulation against the cold. The long winter hair coat serves as insulation by reducing the loss of body heat and provides the first line of defense against the cold. Its insulating value is lost when the horse becomes wet and/or is covered with mud. This is why it is important to provide a dry sheltered area in cold wet weather and regular grooming. In damp weather, be alert for rain rot and other skin problems. If unchecked, rain rot can result in hair loss and irritation to the horse. It is very important to keep the horse from losing its hair coat and body weight and approaching an energy deficient state (the horse must be properly fed).

Most nutritional needs of the horse do not change during the winter season. Vitamin, mineral and protein requirements will still depend upon the horse's age and physiological status and not on the time of year. The horse should be fed according to body condition. Thin horses should be fed some supplemental grain in addition to good quality hay to assure enough energy to produce warmth, while a fat horse will require little or no increase from their fall diet. Most mature horses that are idle and in good flesh can survive the winter quite well on good quality hay and ample clean water.

While horses need shelter from cold winds, rain and snow; it is not necessary to keep them in a closed barn throughout the winter. Horses kept outdoors in the winter with access to a run-in shed, that opens away from the normal wind patterns, will generally have fewer respiratory disease problems than horses kept in poorly ventilated, heated barns. With a three-sided shed, the horse can take shelter during a rain or snowstorm and its insulating hair remains dry and fluffed. When the storm is over, the horse can emerge and be comfortable even though the mercury has dropped below zero. Horses maintained in an enclosed barn should be exercised regularly, to maintain muscling and health.

One important aspect of care that often is neglected is hoof care. Even though you are not regularly riding the horse, the hooves still grow during the winter months. In addition, the horse is traveling on uneven, frozen ground that can crack and break feet. Have the shoes removed and the hooves trimmed before turning the horse out for winter, and have the feet trimmed on a regular basis. This insures that when spring arrives, the horse will have sound hooves that will be capable of holding a shoe.

The important thing is — do not just turn horses out and forget about them. Every day at every feeding, horses should receive at least a visual examination.

March

Media attention prompted packers and processors to take additional steps to establish certification programs for their suppliers.

USDA announced that in the fall will be a "chicken holiday" of three days in an effort to rid flocks of avian influenza.

USDA announced a settlement with the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) and Michigan Pork Producer Association to continue the Pork Checkoff Program. This ensured the separation of the National Pork Board and the NPPC.

"Cyagra Z" and "Genesis Z," two cloned calves owned by the Wiles family of Futuraland 2020 Holsteins, Williamsport, Md., arrived at the farm, the first cloned calves to be returned to the farm.

April

NPPC canceled the World Pork Expo to protect U.S. swine from foot and mouth disease.

Officials launched Pennsylvania's program to detect and control mosquitoes that carry west Nile virus with $3.3 million in grants to counties for mosquito surveillance and control.

Pennsylvania legislators unveiled a bill to combat agro-terrorism (deliberate infection of farm animals with contagious diseases) at a capitol news conference.

May

A proposed law was introduced in the Pennsylvania House of Representatives that would require stricter sanitation standards for animal exhibitors in the state. This came as a response to an outbreak of E. coli bacteria reported to have caused illness in a Montgomery County girl.

In New York, the Assembly passed legislation creating a Council on Sustainable Agriculture within the Department of Agriculture and Markets.

June

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture distributed thousands of posters to county and community fairs to highlight awareness of E. coli and prevent the entry of foot and mouth disease into the commonwealth.

The National Institute for Animal Agriculture (NIAA) announced that it would, with a grant from the USDA, carry out national producer education as the first part in the effort to eradicate scrapie from the nation's sheep and goat herds.

USDA released a breeding structure report that stated that larger operations account for nearly three-fourths of the U.S. pig crop. The average number of pigs per year per breeding animal has increased from 10.3 in 1979 to 16.2 in 2000.

Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman announced that $30 million would be available through two new programs. This provided additional conservation assistance to the nation's landowners.

July

The separation of the National Pork Producers Council from the checkoff-funded activities of the National Pork Board went into effect.

Farm Show Complex announced a $66.2 million upgrade to make the facilities "world-class."

August

Pennsylvania observed its 200,000-acre milestone in August at Ag Progress Days in Rockspring, Centre County.

The USDA announced new confidentiality guidelines for the Livestock Mandatory Reporting Program which would, according to USDA, increase the number of reports available while protecting the identify of the market participants.

September

Although the epicenters were in New York, Washington, D.C., and western Pennsylvania, shockwaves reverberated throughout the world on September 11 as a result of terrorist attacks. Ag trade was among the many victims of the atrocities.

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) expanded Pennsylvania's drought watch to a total of 45 counties.

The five milk cooperatives of Advantage Dairy Group discontinued merger discussions.

October

Four-year-old Holstein Tri-Day Ashlyn ET was named supreme champion at the All-American Dairy Show in Harrisburg. She then went on to be named supreme cow of all breeds at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis.

Beef and pork production set records during October. Commercial meat production for the U.S. totaled 4.26 billion pounds in October.

November

USDA announces that it will visit area dairies in January to conduct the initial survey for Dairy 2002, a national study of health and health management practice at U.S. dairies.

December

The year finished on a high note in farmland preservation with a record-breaking 309 farms preserved in 2001. The Farmland Preservation Board also approved the addition of Bradford and Huntingdon counties into the Pennsylvania Farmland Preservation Program, bringing the total number of counties participating to 53. Since 1989, Pennsylvania has preserved 1,785 farms, totaling 215,243 acres across Pennsylvania.

The Bowersox family, Middleburg, won the National Christmas Tree contest in August to be able to supply the White House with their holiday tree.

Lancaster Farming Activities

Here at the newspaper, the year brought changes and challenges, but also served to help the paper grow and improve. A few of the highlights include:

The last issue in February of Lancaster Farming was the final published under the direction of former editor Everett Newswanger.

Andy Andrews assumed the editorship of the paper. Andrews joined the paper in 1990 as a staff writer after working as a writer and editor for several industries. A 1982 graduate of Temple University in magazine journalism, Andrews was raised in New Holland, where he worked on a farm.

Also in February, Lancaster Farming added "NASS: Agriculture Counts," a new column by Marc Tosiano, Pennsylvania state statistician. Other columns have been added since, including "Focus On Dairy" from the capitol region team, and a new column, "Ag Sustainability," by Ed Herrmann. "Farm Shelf" is a book review column also begun this year.

In mid-March, Lou Ann Good, who joined the newspaper as a staff writer in 1987, was named food and family features editor.

New correspondents working for the paper since March include Kristin Russell, Blair County; Deanna Cunfer, Carbon/Schuylkill counties; Virginia Heckert, Columbia County; Deb Wilhelm, Armstrong County; Sandra Lepley, Somerset County; Gay Brownlee, new Virginia correspondent; Becca Gregor, Penn State area correspondent; and Dr. Tom Hopkins, Maryland correspondent.

Early this year the paper conducted a readership survey to serve our subscribers more effectively.

Lehigh County Conservation District Recognizes Outstanding Conservation Efforts

FOGELSVILLE (Lehigh Co.) — The Lehigh County Conservation District presented its annual "Outstanding Conservation Farmer of the Year" and "Outstanding Conservation Educator of the Year" awards for 2001 on Dec. 14 at the Seipstown Grange, Fogelsville.

Harold and Mildred Gehringer and Kenneth and Diane Gehringer of Four Springs Farm, Weisenberg Township, received the 2001 Conservation Farmer of the Year Award in recognition of their efforts to implement and maintain soil conservation practices and structures on their farm.

Debbie Siglin, 1085 Rock Street, Lehighton, was recognized as the 2001 Conservation Educator of the Year. A fifth grade teacher at Slatington Elementary School, Siglin was chosen because of her efforts to teach environment and conservation related subjects to her students.

County Commissioners Percy Dougherty, Joseph Maher, Joseph Pascuzzo and Roger Reis from the Lehigh County Board of Commissioners and Jane Ervin, county executive, presented the award winners with proclamations. State Representative, Julie Harhart, presented a proclamation from the House of Representatives to Mrs. Siglin.

Mrs. Siglin has been involved with a team of teachers who applied for and were awarded an environmental grant by the PA Department of Education. The grant, entitled "Water Works for You" addressed water awareness and conservation. It includes a K-12 activity guide, field trips for water testing, creation of a Website for data sharing, mascot "Rudy Raindrop," Project WET workshops and the addition of educational materials for elementary and high school levels.

Currently, Mrs. Siglin is involved in the new Greenhouse Project, which will focus on soil resources.

She has utilized a variety of resources in her education programs. Trexler-Lehigh County Game Preserve provided training for Project WET and Project Wild. The Wildlife Information Center, of Slatington, and the Slatington Public Library sponsor her reading program, W.W.o.W. — The Wonderful World of Wildlife. Beltzville State Park provided training for Project Food, Land and People. The Carbon County Environmental Education Center provided training in composting.

Through her classroom and programs, Mrs. Siglin creates in her students an interest in preserving the environment so others can enjoy it.

The Gehringers have a cash grain and livestock operation on 235 rolling acres in Weisenberg Township. Their relationship with the Conservation District began on Aug. 29, 1984, when they signed up as a district cooperator. The Gehringers operate 975 acres and on that acreage they have installed and maintained the following conservation practices.

Management practices installed: conservation crop rotation, conservation tillage, residue management, upland wildlife habitat management, and forest stand improvement.

Technical practices installed: contour farming, contour stripcropping, cover cropping, critical area planting, diversions, waterways, terraces, and subsurface drainage.

Changes, Challenges

Lancaster, worked as editor of the Livestock Reporter since 1975.

April brought Dave Lefever, staff writer, to the paper. Lefever grew up on a farm in northern Lebanon County and had helped to manage a farm in Frederick County, Maryland. Lefever and his wife, Katrina, live on a 10-acre farm in Hanover and raise Jacob sheep.

In May the paper, for the first time in its 45-year history, included more than 100 market reports in section A.

June saw the publishing of the dairy recipe contest entries. Lancaster Farming also announced a beef recipe contest in November.

Lou Ann Good, food and family features editor, flew to Poland for three weeks in September. Her diary, feature articles, and photographs sent from Poland added a cultural flair to the newspaper.

Also in September, Lancaster Farming introduced the "Dairy Plus" supplement-booklet, which will continue as a quarterly publication.

In November Lancaster Farming hosted its first "Family Farm Survival Seminar" at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster.

Thank you for your readership and friendship. We all enjoy the agriculture industry and are looking forward to another rewarding year reporting on the critical, colorful, and eventful business we call farming.

Brown's Orchards, Farm Market

Brenda Brown, chairperson for the workshops and farm tours, is part of the family-operated Brown's Orchards and Farm Market in Loganville. Located just off of a major interstate, the market is ideally situated.

Earl and Margaret Brown began the business when they purchased 38 acres in 1948 and moved with their three young sons from the city to the countryside. They marketed their produce on the steps of the home — steps that have been saved and are now displaying fruits in the market.

Their oldest, Stan, returned to the farm with his wife Nona and they continued the family business while raising their own family. In 1979 their daughter Linda began selling her own baked goods, a sales avenue that developed into a bakery. A country store, complete with a bakery, was completed in 1985.

In 2000, the store was remodeled and expanded to triple the size of the original store. Approximately 120 employees, 50 of them full time, work at the market and in the orchards.

Current owners Stan, general manager, and Nona, promotions and advertising, are joined by their son Scott, orchard manager, along with his wife Brenda, office administrator, who are also working full-time in the business. Scott and Brenda's children, Mandy and Travis, also work part-time on the farm, the fourth generation to work in the business.

Home-grown specialties include tree-ripened fruits such as apples, nectarines and pears, plus berries and 20 acres of sweet corn and 4-5 acres of pumpkins.

"We buy from local growers whenever we can," said Brenda. "We like to buy locally."

The Browns also bring in produce for a year-round supply.

The orchard has increased to 180 acres that include 50 acres of apples and 40 acres of peaches, followed by five or less acres each of nectarines, pears, or sweet cherries.

"We gear production for direct market sales, then open the excess to the pick-your-own market," said Stan.

Product Variety

In the store, an assortment of products allows the market to be a "one-stop" for customers.

The store's bakery has proven to be a valuable outlet for the produce grown in the orchards. The in-season fruit often finds its way into the pies, according to Brenda. In a three-day period at Thanksgiving, the store sold 4,000 pies.

Additionally, fruit breads made at Christmastime are included in the 6,000 gift baskets delivered during the holidays. "The bakery accounts for one-third of the sales," she said.

Also a deli, Brown's newest addition, offers soups, sandwiches, and salads.

Homemade fudge or other treats have also been successful, built on the premise that customers "like to see things done," said Stan. "It's out where people can see it being made."

Gourmet foods, plants, floral arrangements, and country gifts are available at the gift shop.

The market also offers their own cider, made on the premises. The fall, in fact, is one of the busiest times of the year for Brown's. "October is the busiest sales months for fall food," said Brenda Brown. Peach season in August and holiday sales of December also keep the market busy.

Stan attributes the market's growth and success to quality and customer service. "We've been here 50 years and have developed a good loyal customer base because of the quality items that customers really want," he said.

It is a challenge to keep the country, small-town feel to the store amidst the growth, remodeling, and change of the market, however, "we're very conscious of user-friendly welcoming atmosphere for people to come into," he said.

"Another asset to the market is that the customers enjoy coming to the farm. When we decided to move into an enclosed building we didn't want to put a steel building up and not have the warmth of a wood structure, so we used wood, plus added wall treatments and antiques."

Another way to connect with their customers is the compilation of an employee and customer cookbook, now in the works at the market.

"Our goal is customer service in a country atmosphere," said Brenda.

An "orchard retreat" picnic pavilion offers 25 tables and a snack bar, complete with fruit topping for ice cream, allows customers to enjoy their time on the farm.

In addition, the Brown family has been involved in many community organizations and has donated products to various causes.

"You have to be a part of the community — that's very vital and important," said Stan.

As with many direct marketers, diversity is key to managing risk. "Diversity helps because we can't control the weather and crops," said Brenda.

"It's a great insurance policy," said Stan. "If there's a failure in crops, we're still able to hold our own because of the fruits," he said.

Variety in the products offered not only lowers risk but also brings customers back to the store several times a week.

"If you don't' have a variety of other things for customers to come back for, they won't come back just for, say, peaches," said Brown.

Organic Practices, Opportunities Explored At Conference

PENNINGTON, N.J. — On Jan. 26, hundreds of farmers, landowners, and educators will descend on Cook College in New Brunswick, N.J. for the Northeast Organic Farming Association's 11th annual winter conference, "Greener Fields: Organic Systems In Practice."

From 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 26, this year's conference explores organic farming's special ability to demonstrate sound environmental stewardship while incorporating the best lessons from holistic and integrated systems management. The lineup of speakers and presenters for 2002 promises something for everyone, with 18 sessions spread across four time slots.

A choice of four two-hour super sessions will kick off the morning, covering whole farm planning, farmland preservation, commercial scale organic tomato production, and organic apple orcharding. The remaining sessions include topics as diverse as farm-based marketing, livestock and grasslands management, organic no-till, small equipment maintenance, and historic farm buildings.

For vegetable growers, offerings include a mini-course in commercial-scale organic tomato production by Cumberland County Extension Agent Wes Kline, a panel presentation by Pete Nitzsche and Bill Sciarappa of Morris and Monmouth County Extension, respectively, on "Ethnic and Specialty Vegetables," and session by Scott Steinetz of Maple Farm on "Integrating and Applying Plastic Mulch With Drip Irrigation."

Livestock topics include David and Joy Stutzman of Pasture's Pride Natural Meats near Kutztown, speaking about their experiences in producing and direct-marketing grass-fed beef, chicken, and pork without hormones or antibiotics, and Darrell Emmick's introduction to sustainable grassland management. Emmick is a NRCS grassland specialist and the eastern regional coordinator for the Grazing Lands Conservation Initiative.

Farming is art, science and business. John Berry, extension agent for Lehigh County, will run an interactive workshop on "Whole Farm Management: From Business to Philosophy," Robin Brumfield, RCE extension specialist in farm management, will present a session on "Understanding the Bottom Line."

Two further sessions are scheduled to focus on marketing issues. In the morning, Rob Ferber of Philly Chile Company Farm will share valuable tips on how to "brand" your farm and reach customers without spending a lot on advertising. After lunch, Ed Lidzbarski of E. R. & Son Farm will discuss wholesale marketing for organic farms. Lidzbarski will be joined by Pat Mullen, Ron Good, and Frank Kinkle of the Jersey Fresh program.

A pair of sessions will speak to the past, present, and future of agricultural landscapes. Greg Romano, executive director of the state agricultural development committee, will lead a session on "Access to Land: Keeping the 'Farm' In Farmland Preservation." Later in the day Elrich Endersby of the New Jersey Barn Company will share his knowledge of historic farm structures and farmstead design. Complementing these will be Michael Phillips, owner/manager of Lost Nation Orchard in New Hampshire and author of "The Apple Grower: A Guide for the Organic Orchardist," who will present a workshop on "Successful Organic Orcharding." Elaine Ferry of Arcadia Farm, will speak on "Responsible Wildcrafting and Woodland Medicinal Production."

Joseph Heckman, extension specialist in soil fertility, will speak on "Managing Natural Sources of Nitrogen." John Teasdale will describe his research at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Station on prospects for organic no-till.

Maintenance staff from the Snyder Research and Extension Farm will conduct a hands-on workshop on small equipment, and Extension Wildlife Specialist David Drake will survey wildlife damage prevention and control for organic farms.

Those who missed the National Organic Program Briefing in Pennington Dec. 1 will get a second chance to get up to speed courtesy of NOFA-NJ's Certification Administrator Erich Bremer, Executive Director Karen Anderson, and Emily Brown-Rosen, policy director at the Organic Materials Review Institute.

For a complete conference program and registration information, contact NOFA-NJ at (609) 737-6848, or via e-mail at nofanj@aol.com.

Dairy Alliance Offers Standard Operating Procedures Help

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dairy producers and agribusiness advisers have been bombarded in recent years with the recommendation to use standard operating procedures (SOPs). SOPs are often touted as the answer to whatever management problem is currently challenging a dairy farm.

Unfortunately, this recommendation rarely is accompanied by any advice or guidance. SOPs are a proven and powerful tool for managing people and resources, but to fully benefit from them, a dairy business must commit to leading a team effort and following through by monitoring results.

Robin Burke, dairy nutrition specialist with Agway Feed and Nutrition, recently participated in Dairy Alliance's SOP training workshop at the Mercer County Penn State Cooperative Extension office. She brought along a few of her producer clients who are interested in developing their own SOPs.

During the interactive workshop, Burke and her clients worked on actual SOPs that the producers plan to implement in their dairy businesses. They were able to practice skills that they learned during the workshop and directly compare their plans to those of other producers.

"My clients were able to obtain more from this workshop than other workshops that are usually offered." Burke says. "My clients were actually able to write SOPs in the workshop."

Advisers and producers worked together in small groups and shared ideas as they wrote. Later, all of the producers and advisers compared their first-draft procedures and pointed out the relative strengths and weaknesses of each.

The Dairy Alliance workshop emphasizes an important lesson about writing and implementing SOPs — it has to be a team effort. On an actual dairy farm, farm workers, managers and dairy farm advisers — all SOP stakeholders — influence how work is performed. They all must be satisfied with the farm's standard operating procedures.

If all stakeholders share commitment to the procedure because they helped create it, then there is a strong likelihood that it will be adopted and supported. Of course, if anyone feels left out of the process, they are much less likely to support the resulting procedures.

Whether it's milk quality, feed bunk management or steps for evaluating an employee all effective standard operating procedures begin with a specific result in mind. The first step is to identify what specific work performance will improve through standardization. The last step is to follow through with adjustments based on carefully monitored performance results.

Once performance expectations are clarified among workers, management and advisers, procedure steps can be designed that address weaknesses in performance. Results then are monitored and regularly shared with the SOP stakeholders. Follow-through is completed when performance bottlenecks are identified and corrected, workers are coached to improve performance and procedures are changed to capitalize on creative solutions to problems.

Some of the producers participating in the Dairy Alliance workshop commented that the opportunity to practice writing SOPs really helped them. They feel more comfortable implementing standard procedures in their own businesses now because they've had some practice and a clear model to follow.

In addition, they said the monitoring plans would help them to capture the full potential of standardized procedures. Burke now has a new tool that she can use to help other clients improve their management practices.

For more information about the Dairy Alliance SOP Workshop, contact Richard Stup, human resource specialist, at rich@dairyalliance.org or (814) 652-6430. To find out if an SOP workshop is scheduled near you, contact Tammy Perkins, program manager, at tammy@dairyalliance.org or 1-888-373-PADA.

Drought Emergency Declared In Delaware Basin

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — With reservoir storage and groundwater supplies well below seasonable averages, the Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC) declared a drought emergency Dec. 18 in the 13,539 square-mile watershed which drains portions of New York State, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware.

Under the emergency order, the commission can call for releases from federal, state, and privately-owned reservoirs to bolster flows in the Delaware River and tributary streams. This additional volume of water in the waterways helps protect aquatic life and repel the upstream migration of salty water from the Delaware Bay which can cause corrosion problems for riverbank industry and increase water treatment costs for municipalities.

The reservoir releases will complement those from three huge water supply reservoirs at the headwaters of the Delaware River which are at record low levels. Combined storage in the impoundments, which are owned by New York City, stands at some 64 billion gallons, just over 115 billion gallons below normal for this time of year. It's the lowest level since the last of the three reservoirs went on line in 1967.

With adoption of the drought declaration, the commission also can (at the request of one of the four signatory states) require major water users in that state to prepare contingency plans for water curtailment in the event it becomes necessary and submit those plans to the commission.

Also under the declaration, water currently stored in Lake Wallenpaupack, a power generation impoundment located near Hawley, Pa., and New York State's Mongaup reservoir system can be called on to help increase river flows. Lake Wallenpaupack is owned by PPL Generation, LLC; Mirant owns the Mongaup system, another power generation facility located near Monticello, N.Y.

The commission also is requesting the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to retain storage in the F.E. Walter Reservoir and provide releases at the commission's request. The flood control impoundment is located on a tributary of the Lehigh River in Luzerne County.

And the commonwealth of Pennsylvania is being asked to release water when needed from Lake Nockamixon, a recreational reservoir located in Bucks County.

Under the commission's drought operating plan, which has been implemented in stages over the past several months, the allowable water supply diversions to New York City from its reservoirs have been lowered from a normal of 800 to 520 million gallons per day (mgd), and diversions to northern New Jersey through the Delaware and Raritan Canal have been lowered from the normal of 100 to 65 mgd.

In addition, minimum flow targets on the Delaware River have been lowered from 1,750 to 1,350 cubic feet per second (cfs) at Montague, N.J., and from 3,000 to 2,500 cfs at Trenton, N.J. Reservoir releases are made to help meet these targets.

The cutbacks in the out-of-basin diversions and the flow targets, which save up to 540 million gallons a day of storage, began to take effect on October 29 when falling storage triggered a drought watch. A further drop in storage triggered a drought warning on Nov. 4, and on Dec. 1 a drought was triggered as storage continued to drop.

More than 17 million people rely on the waters of the Delaware River Basin. New York City, which lies outside the watershed, gets roughly half its water from its three Upper Delaware reservoirs — Pepacton, Neversink, and Cannonsville.

In addition, Merrill Creek Reservoir, located near Phillipsburg, N.J., and constructed by a consortium of electric utilities in the late 1980s, has released some 1.2 billion gallons of water into the Delaware River to replace water lost through evaporation during power generation. The releases are triggered by operating criteria approved by the commission.

Rainfall is approximately 10 inches below normal for the year in the upper basin. The last five months also have been very dry in the central portion of the watershed, particularly in the Philadelphia area, central and southern New Jersey, and in extreme northern Delaware. Southern Delaware has not been as hard hit by the prolonged dry spell.

"With cooler weather and generally reduced demand for water, the dry conditions are not as noticeable in day-to-day activities as they would be during the summer," noted Carol Collier, the commission's executive director. "However, refilling the large reservoirs will require above normal rain and snow during the winter and spring. For this reason, additional conservation measures are needed now."

In response to the parched conditions, the commonwealth of Pennsylvania on Dec. 5 declared a drought warning for all counties located within the basin with the exception of Luzerne and Lackawanna, which are under a drought watch. New Jersey declared a drought warning on Nov. 21 for the portion of the state located within the Delaware Basin, mainly the counties that flank the Delaware River. New York State has declared drought warnings for six counties in the Delaware River Watershed — Delaware, Greene, Orange, Schoharie, Sullivan, and Ulster. Broome and Chenango counties, parts of which also drain to the Delaware River, are under a drought watch.

Voluntary conservation measures are being requested in these areas, a move that is strongly supported by the commission. Reduction in non-essential water use lowers water demand and subsequently will allow for better recovery of ground and surface water systems during the winter and spring period.

Under the drought declaration declared recently, the four basin states will continue to be responsible for the declaration of county or statewide drought emergencies and will be responsible for the implementation and enforcement of associated restrictions on non-essential water uses in these areas.

The declarations by the states are based on comprehensive sets of drought indicators including precipitation, reservoir storage, and ground water and stream flow levels. The commission's drought plan is unique in that it is triggered solely by declining reservoir storage. It is designed for managing regional storage and complements the plans of the states which respond to local water supply conditions.

Penn State Offers Ag Business Program

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Tilling the Soil of Opportunity is a multi session program (12-weeks) offered by Penn State University, to provide farmers/agribusinesses, or anyone working in food or the green industry with the skills to reinvent their enterprises.

Business planning, marketing research, and financial management skills are a few of the concrete tools taught by certified extension educators and local business experts. Using proven adult learning techniques and a curriculum tailored to the unique needs of Pennsylvania agriculture, participants will evaluate their business ideas and complete business plans for a banker's review.

The program is designed to help a broad range of small to mid sized farmers, food processors, distributors, retailers, food professionals and others working in the agriculture sector. Owners and managers of new and existing businesses are encouraged to participate. Even if you have a business dream or goal that you would like to make happen. This program can help make those visions a reality. Each region adapts its course programming to meet local needs.

Pa. Farmers Take Precautions Against Agro-Terrorism

UNIVERSITY PARK, (Centre Co.) — Worries about agro-terrorism have caused Pennsylvania farmers to ratchet up already tight precautions protecting their operations from plant and animal diseases, according to an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"The speed of transportation concerns us the most," says David Wolfgang, senior research associate in veterinary science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "You can get on a plane and be anywhere in the world in 36 hours."

"We must be more vigilant for the suspicious and unconventional behavior of those coming into contact with our industry," says Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes.

Thanks to fast, modern transportation, Keystone State farm products and animals are shipped all over the planet quickly. That's great for the state's economy. But plant and animal diseases from around the globe can be brought here just as quickly.

So quickly that Pennsylvania farmers and other agricultural professionals must take precautions or they stand to lose millions of dollars in livestock and business. The result could be higher food prices for consumers. News headlines blaring new cases of foot-and-mouth disease in Europe and South America may seem remote, and you might think it can't happen here, but the state's agricultural community knows better.

With current worries about terrorists bringing diseases such as foot-and-mouth disease, mad cow disease, avian influenza and other contagious outbreaks to Pennsylvania, "biosecurity," a coordinated series of practices employed to prevent infectious diseases from being introduced into a facility, is a word on every savvy farmer's tongue.

"The two cornerstones of biosecurity are first don't bring disease problems onto the farm and second have some procedures in place to watch for infectious diseases in the operation," explains Wolfgang. "Screen animals before they come onto the farm, and then use some sort of a quarantine or isolation facility to monitor animals after they are introduced."

Pennsylvania's agriculture industry is huge. The state ranks fourth after California, Wisconsin and Minnesota in dairy, in the top 20 in swine, in the top 10 in poultry and egg production, and in the top 10 in many other farm categories. The trend towards larger, more intensive farms is strong, and, according to Wolfgang, that's brought biosecurity concerns to the forefront.

"Large, intensive poultry and swine operations have been more proactive in developing programs to keep out pathogens," he says. "It is not uncommon in the bigger facilities for people to shower before they go in and leave their street clothes in a locker room. These operations may require visitors to wear special, protective suits. At the very least the intensive farms have foot baths and restricted access to animals and people."

Wolfgang notes that many of the progressive bio-conscious farms issue disposable boots and/or protective, disposable clothing to visitors.

Traditionally, he points out, dairy farms in Pennsylvania were small, isolated, "closed" operations. "If they bought a bull occasionally, it was likely to come from an operation down the road or the adjacent county," he says. "As dairy operations have gotten bigger, they often bring in animals from out of state or Canada. And when you bring in animals from far away, you can bring in unwanted organisms and infectious diseases."

The state has just under 10,000 dairy farms, with an average herd size of 72 animals. But Wolfgang points out that several hundred farms in the state have more than 300 head of lactating cattle. A handful have 1,000 head or more and just a few have around 2,000 head.

The trend is towards more larger farms and fewer smaller operations. He says the large farms already supply a quarter of the state's milk.

"Nationally, agriculture is using 25 percent fewer acres for production than 50 years ago," says Wolfgang, "but we produce 50 percent more food. We are getting more out of what we use. But these intensive farming practices have made biosecurity more important.

"We hear a lot about foot-and-mouth disease — that has heightened awareness about contagious diseases. The good news is that the agriculture industry is taking steps with biosecurity and is preventing and controlling diseases," he adds.

"The industry in Pennsylvania is doing more to keep diseases from coming onto the farm and stopping them from leaving the farm. That improves product quality and food safety. The cleaner we make the products leaving the farm, the healthier the food is when it reaches the consumer."

Healthy plants and animals mean less pesticide spraying, the use of fewer antibiotics and less risk of toxins and contaminants in food, according to Wolfgang.

Legislation Proposed To Protect State's Water Resources

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Mark Schweiker, DEP Secretary David E. Hess recently outlined the Administration's new water resources initiative designed to inventory and protect Pennsylvania's water resources from overuse.

"Water is one of our most precious resources," Hess said. "It is vital to our economy and to natural systems and habitats, yet we know little about how much water we have and how it's used. Proposed legislation will allow us to better manage our water resources by laying a foundation of solid information on which we can make decisions.

"In April and May, citizens from all across the state attended special Water Forums to express their most serious water resource concerns. They all had this in common — they aren't happy with the way water resources are managed and they want changes."

Hess discussed the water resources initiative at the first-ever Water Conservation Congress held at the Penn Stater Conference Center, State College.

The initiative is included in proposed legislation — Senate Bill 1230, sponsored by Sen. James Gerlach (R-Chester) and House Bill 2230, sponsored by Rep. Art Hershey (R-Chester) — that will accomplish four of the Schweiker Administration's water resources objectives that were recommended at the Water Forums:

• Update the State Water Plan: DEP would complete an update of the State Water Plan in three years and have updates every five years thereafter. A new Statewide Water Resources Advisory Committee would be formed to help guide the planning process and assure broad public participation, including a formal review of the updated State Water Plan;

• Identify Critical Water Planning Areas: It is expected that during the updating of the State Water Plan, areas will be identified where the demand for water exceeds, or is projected to exceed, available supplies. These areas would be designated as Critical Water Planning Areas and identified on a multi-municipal watershed basis, possibly covering a dozen or more local governments. Identifying Critical Water Planning Areas allows time and attention to be focused on those areas of Pennsylvania that have water problems without putting in place a large, complicated bureaucracy;

• Create a Water Conservation Program: The act would establish a formal program to promote water conservation and water use efficiency practices for all water users. A Water Resources Technical Assistance Center also would be created to promote the use and development of water conservation and water-use efficiency education and technical assistance programs. Grants also would be provided for water-resources education and technical assistance; and

• Set Water Well Construction Standards: The act would modernize the Water Well Drillers License Act of 1956, transfer responsibilities from the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) to DEP and require DEP to develop water-well standards. DEP, through the Environmental Quality Board, would establish minimum standards for siting, construction, alteration and abandonment of water wells with the help of a special 12-member Water Well Technical Advisory Committee.

"Protecting our water resources is an idea that is tied closely to our improved land-use planning laws," Sen. Gerlach said. "This legislation is intended to help communities work together on watershed planning issues — to protect our natural resources and guard against water shortages and water degradation. It recognizes that water, like land, is a finite and precious resource that must be managed to the best benefit of our people and our environment."

Rep. Hershey said, "The need for this legislation is abundantly clear. Drought conditions have existed over the last several years, and we are only going to increase our water uses in the future. We need to develop an up-to-date inventory of our water supply and uses. This legislation is vital toward that end."

WE SHOULD CHANGE OUR PETROLEUM DEPENDENCE

With the terrible events from the terrorist attack on Sept. 11, our country became victimized to violence.

Americans and the world will remember where they were and what they were doing when the terrorists seized the hearts and minds of this nation through this despicable and cowardly violent act. This price that was paid by so many lives will be remembered with other tragic events throughout our American history.

There is another enemy that is terrorizing the world we live in. You could almost say we were being held hostage. Every one of our lives is dependent on petroleum in one form or another.

We as Americans consume more than 70 percent of all the oil produced worldwide. Our petroleum imports account for 45 percent of our nation's current trade deficit. Our current trade deficit is more than $59.9 billion. This is $32.9 billion more than in 1987. This equates to 20 million barrels per day of petroleum products. When you consider the cost of around $25 a barrel, this equals $500 million each day. (A barrel of oil is 42 gallons, which converts our current daily usage to 840 million gallons of oil.) The oil production from domestic sources dropped from 7.4 million barrels per day in 1991 to about 5.6 million barrels today.

The majority of our fuel consumption is through cars and commercial vehicles. Vehicle miles driven increased from 1.1 trillion miles annually in 1970 to more than 2.2 trillion miles per year in 1996. Our fuel consumption increased from 12 billion gallons in 1970 to more than 147 billion gallons in 1996 as well. The total number of vehicles registered increased 78 percent since 1970.

As vehicle numbers increase, so does the trade deficit. It is currently projected that petroleum imports will rise to 70 percent of the U.S. trade deficit in the next 10 years. This increase is expected because of the growth anticipated in the transportation sector.

Without looking at the consumption and economic implications, we need to reconsider our dependence on both foreign and domestic oil.

We have the most underutilized resource all around us. The solution to this problem may be found in agriculture. This sleeping giant is struggling to make profitability from grain and food crops. Many of our nation's farmers rely on government subsidy payments to remain in business.

Farmers are producing gain and barely making a profit. We are the most efficient producers of food and fiber in the world. If it were not for the federal government supporting farm prices at nearly 50 percent of every dollar that returns to the farm, agriculture would be bankrupt. In many instances, farmers are overproducing commodities in several production areas.

The urgent need for biofuel development will help solve some of our nation's energy needs. It is projected by many experts in the fuel industry that by the year 2020 the world will have depleted its petroleum reserves. The real cost of oil is not reflected in the actual price you pay at the gas pump. If you consider the environmental cost, or the cost related to military protection of foreign oil, gasoline alone actually costs $5 per gallon. Just the military costs and the politics, which support petroleum, have a cost that exceeds the price we pay for the finished product.

Biofuel production is not a new idea. Ethanol production is made from renewable resources. This is sustainability that cannot be ignored. Our farms have the potential to provide an unlimited supply of fuel feed stock. Everything from grains, grasses, and corn stalks can be used. Animal manures have been used to generate methane gas. Even the by-products from meat packinghouses have potential to be used as a fuel production resource. Animal waste products can be made into biodiesel and methane. (Methane is used to generate electricity.)

Ethanol can be produced from many different crops, plants, and waste materials. Corn has traditionally been used to produce ethanol. However, any plant material that has a high level of cellulose can be used. We have the technology to produce ethanol from waste products used in the building industry. Many waste products usually end up in landfills, which are also beginning to reach capacity.

There is research being conducted by the ARS (Agriculture Research Service) and Department of Energy to utilize garbage in ethanol production. This practice alone would reduce waste materials going into landfills by 85 percent.

Ethanol plants are very expensive to build. Part of the reason for this is the fuel market needs to be stimulated and developed. Fuel plants require investment from many sources. Many of the ethanol plants in operation in America are located throughout the midwestern states. Most are private ventures, with many municipalities beginning to show increasing interest. Public-funded ethanol plants can be an effective way to generate revenue by reducing local and real estate taxes.

Historically, ethanol production leads to jobs. In 1993, more than 200,000 jobs annually were created in midwestern states, according to a study by Northwestern University's Kellogg School of Management. Since that time, ethanol production increased by 20 percent, thus creating more jobs. The plant construction phase created about 370 jobs locally, and provided 5,604 person-years of work.

After the plant was up and operating, 4,000 local jobs were created. The USDA estimated that more than 100,000 jobs could be created if ethanol production increased by 5 billion gallons per year. The USDA also projected that farm income would rise by 2.3 billion dollars nationwide in the same time period. This would be accomplished without price support payments. The incentives to build ethanol plants are beneficial to communities, our environment, and our economy.

We have automobile manufacturers that have ethanol engines and prototype vehicles. Ford Motor Company has several vehicles in production to run on varying blends of ethanol. Two examples are the Ford Taurus and Ford Ranger pickup truck. Other major automobile companies also have cars that efficiently utilize ethanol fuels.

The environmental benefits from ethanol contribute to clean air. The combustion of ethanol fuel produces 80-90 percent fewer hydrocarbons emitted into the atmosphere when pure (100 percent) ethanol is used as the fuel source. The combustion of ethanol actually adds oxygen to the air as a by-product. When ethanol is blended into gasoline at either 10 percent or 85 percent, air pollution is drastically reduced.

Some fuel companies are producing E-10, (ethanol 10 percent) in our region. This is a cost savings to the fuel company. Some of the additives used in unleaded gasoline will be phased out of production for environmental reasons. Ethanol is an important stabilizer that can be used in gasoline to reduce carbon monoxide and other harmful gases. Several midwestern states mandated that E-10 be blended in all gasoline.

In Pennsylvania, there is investigation into ethanol production. The obstacles to be overcome are many, including political objections and efforts by petroleum lobbyists. The petroleum lobby outnumbers the ethanol industry by 100 to 1. At that rate, it's no wonder that politicians vote in favor of incentives from such groups, instead of doing what is right for constituents they represent.

In short, ethanol production needs legislative support and public funding in order to develop production facilities. These plants are feasibly capable to generate revenue that would have a major impact on infrastructure and reduce tax burdens on communities. The economic benefits to local agriculture help keep farms viable and could guarantee the preservation of farms, and farmers.

Ethanol is more expensive to produce than petroleum, however it is taxed at a much lower rate, which makes ethanol cheaper than petroleum. The federal government heavily subsidizes the petroleum industry and then taxes consumers at the pump to make more revenue.

When you consider all the environmental advantages that ethanol provides as a fuel, it may be the most economical and ecologically sound alternative to terrorism.

SPEAKING OF COMMUNICATION — LEARNING SPANISH

Vinton Smith
Dairy Agent
Adams, Cumberland And York Counties

Communicating with employees is an essential task for everyone managing a successful business, regardless of the type of business or the background of the employees. I have seen many dairy farm owners and managers take communication for granted when they are managing "local" employees.

However, when the same managers begin employing Hispanic workers, they quickly realize how important it is to have good communication between everyone on their dairy farm.

There are many different aspects of communication that are important in these situations. They include both verbal and nonverbal communication. When dealing with Hispanic workers, there are additional cultural issues that can impair the quality of communication on your dairy farm. Dairy farm managers who supervise Hispanic workers need to learn how to effectively communicate verbally while understanding nonverbal signals and minimize the impact of the cultural differences.

Your ability as a dairy farm owner or manager to speak to your Hispanic workers is critical to the success of those employees and ultimately the success of your farm. You must be able to effectively train new workers, hold staff meetings, conduct performance appraisals, provide constructive feedback, praise good performance, and listen to your workers concerns.

It is nearly impossible to do any of these essential tasks when managers and employees speak different languages. Therefore, it is very important that you address the language barrier and you take steps to minimize its negative impacts to your farm.

Many dairy farm managers believe it is the responsibility of the Hispanic worker to learn English. I have heard a version of the following statement too many times: "They came here to work, this is The United States, and they need to learn to speak English."

Those of you with this mindset will typically have a more challenging time managing Hispanic workers. You certainly may have expectations that your Hispanic dairy employees learn English, which can have a very positive impact on communication. However, that expectation should coincide with strong efforts on your part to learn Spanish.

Dairy farm managers who hire Hispanic workers quickly learn that employee turnover can be quite high. If he or she is solely dependent on the Hispanic employees to learn English, the language barrier will be very challenging to ever overcome. However, if you strive to learn Spanish, the language barrier will be nearly eliminated.

Many adults find it very challenging to learn a new language. It is important to remember that it can be just as challenging for the Hispanic workers to learn English as it is for us to learn Spanish. However, if each group is trying to learn together, everyone will find that it will be much easier. Working together will also provide additional motivation to communicate in both languages and learn together.

The Capitol Region Dairy Team has coordinated two "Spanish for Dairymen" courses where you can learn how to speak Spanish and learn the dairy specific terms necessary to effectively communicate with your Hispanic workers. The courses will be conducted at the Adams County Agriculture Center in Gettysburg and the Lancaster County Farm and Home Center in Lancaster. Each course consists of 13 conversational-based classes that will be taught by native Mexican instructors from the Berlitz Language Training Center.

You don't have to have any past experience or knowledge of Spanish to participate and still achieve the objective of the courses — the ability to effectively communicate with your Hispanic dairy farm workers. For more information about the courses or to register, call Vinton Smith at (888) 472-0261, ext. 312.

Harvard Study Shows Very Low Risk Of BSE In U.S.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA released a landmark study by Harvard University that shows the risk of Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE) occurring in the United States is extremely low.

The report showed that early protection systems put into place by the USDA and Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) have been largely responsible for keeping BSE out of the U.S. and would prevent it from spreading if it ever did enter the country. Even so, officials outlined a series of actions to be taken that would continue strengthening programs to reduce that risk even further.

The risk assessment was commissioned by USDA and conducted by the Harvard Center for Risk Analysis. It evaluates the ways BSE could spread if it were to ever enter the United States. The report's purpose is to give agencies a scientific analysis to evaluate preventative measures already in place and identify additional actions that should be taken to minimize the risk of BSE.

"The study clearly shows that the years of early actions taken by the federal government to safeguard consumers have helped keep BSE from entering the United States," said Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman. "Even if BSE were to ever be introduced, it would be contained according to the study. However, we cannot let down our guard or reduce our vigilance. We must continue to strengthen these critical programs and today we are announcing a series of actions to bolster our protection systems."

"Based on three years of thorough study, we are firmly confident that BSE will not become an animal or public health problem in America," said Dr. George Gray, deputy director of the Harvard Center for Risk Analysis and director of the project.

In response to the report, Veneman announced a series of actions the USDA would take, in cooperation with HHS, to strengthen its BSE prevention programs and maintain the government's vigilance against the disease.

First, USDA will have the risk assessment peer reviewed by a team of outside experts to ensure its scientific integrity.

Second, the USDA will more than double the number of BSE tests it will conduct this fiscal year, with over 12,500 cattle samples targeted in 2002—up from 5,000 during 2001.

Third, USDA will publish a policy options paper outlining additional regulatory actions that may be taken to reduce the potential risk of exposure and ensure potential infectious materials remain out of the U.S food supply. To ensure its decisions are science-based, options will be tested using the computer model developed through the risk assessment to determine the potential impact they would have on animal and public health.

The options to be considered will include: prohibiting the use of brain and spinal cord from specified categories of animals in human food; prohibiting the use of central nervous system tissue in boneless beef products, including meat from advanced meat recovery (AMR) systems; and prohibiting the use of vertebral column from certain categories of cattle, including downed animals, in the production of meat from advanced meat recovery systems. USDA will invite public comment on the options and then proceed with appropriate regulatory actions.

Fourth, USDA will issue a proposed rule to prohibit the use of certain stunning devices used to immobilize cattle during slaughter.

Fifth, USDA will publish an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (ANPR) to consider additional regulatory options for the disposal of dead stock on farms and ranches. Such cattle are considered an important potential pathway for the spread of BSE in the animal chain.

"We found that even if BSE were ever introduced, it would not become established," said Gray. "With the government programs already in place, even accounting for imperfect compliance, the disease in the cattle herd would quickly die out, and the potential for people to be exposed to infected cattle parts that could transmit the disease is very low."

DEP Secretary Appoints New Northwest Regional Director

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — DEP Secretary David E. Hess has announced the appointment of Kelly Burch to serve as the director of DEP's Northwest Regional Office.

The northwest region encompasses Butler, Clarion, Crawford, Elk, Erie, Forest, Jefferson, Lawrence, McKean, Mercer, Venango and Warren counties.

"Kelly has skillfully represented Pennsylvania at a national and international level in his work on Great Lakes issues," Hess said. "I believe that experience plus his prior work with the department makes him an excellent choice for the post of regional director."

As regional director, Burch will manage more than 200 DEP employees in the 12 counties of northwestern Pennsylvania.

Since 1995, Burch has been chief of the Office of the Great Lakes, managing Pennsylvania's involvement in Great Lakes programs. His responsibilities included representing the Commonwealth on the International Joint Commission's (IJC) Great Lakes Water Quality Board, the Binational Executive Committee, and the Lake Erie Lakewide Management Plan.

On the state level, he served as the remedial action plan coordinator to the Presque Isle Bay Public Advisory Committee that is developing a strategy to address environmental concerns in the bay identified by IJC as an Area of Concern in the Great Lakes. In addition, he represented the Commonwealth at meetings of the Council of Great Lakes Governors and the Great Lakes Protection Fund.

Prior to his appointment to the Office of the Great Lakes, Burch served three years as DEP Great Lakes coordinator and since 1986 was a geologist at the DEP Northwest Regional Office in Meadville in the Oil and Gas Management Program.

Burch replaces Steven Beckman, who accepted a job as an attorney in private practice in August, and James Rozakis, assistant regional director, who filled in as regional director on an interim basis.

Burch holds a bachelor's degree in geology from Edinboro University. He resides in Erie County with his wife and two children.

NASS Agriculture Counts

By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

DAIRY HERD HEALTH

Editor's Note: This is a monthly column from the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service (PASS), a field office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The Website is www.usda.gov/nass/.

In 2002, the health of the Pennsylvania and national dairy herd will be measured as part of USDA's National Animal Health Monitoring System (NAHMS). Different species have been studied in recent years, with dairy last done in 1996.

Pennsylvania is one of 21 major dairy states included in this valuable study. The selected states include 80 percent of the dairy herds and 80 percent of the milk cows nationwide. Other nearby states in the study include New York, Vermont, Ohio, and Virginia.

The NAHMS study is a cooperative effort of NASS and the veterinary services division of APHIS (Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service).

In January and February, about 400 Pennsylvania dairies will be asked for their help in measuring herd health. The study includes various health issues such as Johne's disease, biosecurity, animal waste systems, food safety, and opinions about animal identification.

After the initial NASS interview, dairymen will be offered free tests from APHIS staff, including bulk tank milk cultures, Johne's disease evaluation, fecal cultures, and blood tests. Information from both the NASS and APHIS surveys are strictly confidential. For more information about NAHMS, see www.aphis.usda.gov/vs/ceah/cahm.

Free Catalog

The "NASS 2002 Guide to Products And Services" is available by calling (800) 727-9540. This 30-page booklet describes the national program of agricultural statistics provided by USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS).

All national reports are listed with instructions for how to access the reports at no charge via the Internet, e-mail subscriptions, and a fax service known as NASSFax. The paper reports can also be ordered for a fee.

Year-End Surveys Continue

Last month I discussed the year-end surveys done in December for crops, hogs, and poultry. In January, we ask growers for your help to measure production of other commodities during 2001.

Once again, the surveys mentioned below are conducted in all major states to generate national along with state production statistics for 2001. To see the results of all these surveys, see our Website at www.usda.gov/nass/.

I hope you can find the time to help us make the most accurate "Agriculture Counts" by returning your survey form as soon as possible or answering our questions over the telephone.

Growers Crucial To Accurate Numbers

Recently I have been asked how we generate our agricultural statistics. The source of nearly all our information comes from growers who are most knowledgeable about the commodities they raise.

Most growers take the time to answer our surveys. Thanks to the confidential information provided by growers, we can generate timely and accurate statistics about agriculture.

Thanks to you all. If you have questions, call us at (800) 498-1518.

Jan. 1 Cattle And Sheep Surveys

These two surveys provide the only state-level measure of cattle and sheep herds. In July, only the largest operations are contacted for input to national-level data.

The cattle survey generates inventories for beef cows, milk, cows, bulls, heifers, steers, and calves. The survey also asks and publishes data about death loss, calves born, cattle on feed, and value of breeding stock.

The sheep survey targets inventories and values of ewes, rams, lambs for breeding, and market lambs by weight group. Other data requested includes lambs born, death losses, wool production, and wool prices received by farmers.

A letter was sent to about 1,600 cattle growers and 300 sheep farmers that were selected and we will ask for your help during early January. Both the "Cattle" and "Sheep And Goats" reports will be issued Feb. 1, 2002 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm). Both reports include number of operations and inventories by size groups.

Floriculture Production

The greenhouse and nursery industry is consistently among the top five sectors of Pennsylvania agriculture. The annual survey provides a measure of the floriculture portion of this industry. (The nursery portion is only measured every other year and was last done for 2000 production.)

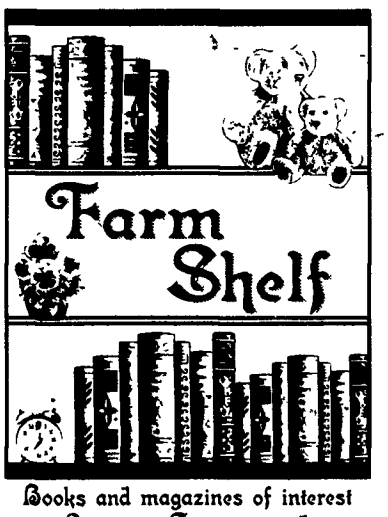
The annual floriculture survey was recently mailed to about 1,000 producers in Pennsylvania as part of a 36-state survey across the nation. The results of the survey include information about production and average prices received for various crops: annual bedding plants, herbaceous perennials, flowering potted plants, cut flowers, cut (florist) greens, foliage plants, and propagative material.

Some growers have used the report to evaluate their own prices against the state average and surrounding states. The "Floriculture Crops, 2001 Summary" will be issued April 25, 2002 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).

Honey Production

This program generates state and national statistics about number of colonies, honey production, stocks on hand, and average prices.

In Pennsylvania, about 250 apiarists have already been sent the annual survey. Telephone calls will be made to nonrespondents in late January. The "Honey" report will be published Feb. 28, 2002 (see www.usda.gov/nass/search.htm).



Books and magazines of interest to Lancaster Farming readers

ANDY ANDREWS

TRUE NAMES, AND THE OPENING OF THE CYBERSPACE FRONTIER, by Vernor Vinge, ed. by James Frenkel. TOR, 2001, 352 pp., $14.95. ISBN 0-312-86207-5

Exactly how much impact has the Internet had on agriculture?

We at Lancaster Farming depend very heavily on the Internet for newsgathering. We could be that much less without it.

But Vinge looks at how the Internet has affected the very soul of being American — our intellectual rights, property rights, and personal privacy in an age when there are Internet companies that can track you anywhere, anytime, throughout the world.

In an age of "cookies" and banking privacy privileges, TRUE NAMES begins in the summer of 1979. As Vinge writes, "True Names was the first story I ever wrote with a word processor: a TECO editor running in a Heathkit LSI 11/03. For me, the writing environment was heaven on earth!" The story appeared in a Dell Binary Star "double novel" book (along with "Nightflyers" by George R.R. Martin) in early 1981. The "mere science fiction" novella, which spoke about maintaining personal privacy in an era of the Internet, was in and out of print since, Vinge noted in his introduction to the volume. And the ideas actually spurned research being conducted now.

But the future comes onto us so strongly that all industries, not just agriculture, are affected. On page 30, one of the book's contributing essayists, Danny Hillis, writes: "Our problem is that, literally, we cannot imagine the future. The pace of technological change is so great that we cannot know what type of world we are leaving for our children. If we plant acorns, we cannot reasonably expect that our children will sit under the oak trees. Or that they will even want to. The world is changing too fast for that.... Much of our generation is employed at jobs our parents never imagined."

In another essay, "How is the NII Like a Prison?", Alan Wexelblat, who works for a small software company, pointed out that the formal name of the Internet is the National Information Infrastructure (NII). On page 109, Wexelblat notes how often we simply give up information for commercial transactions, and how that information can be used and processed either for — or at what times may seem against — us.

Again and again, consumer information leads inevitably to product marketing. The author notes that "in response to our manufactured needs, we will be fed a steady diet of 500+ channels, each with its content carefully labeled to avoid potentially offending anyone, just as CDs and video games are labeled and rated. These ratings will be the result of panoptic classifications and the people who buy them can expect to have their preferences recorded and analyzed so that the next offerings to reach their homes, cars, and offices will be closer to their expected tastes and values." (page 114-115).

Many references are made to the "downside" of the Internet. Authors point to the "Four Horsemen" of the NII — drug dealers, unnamed foreign terrorists, organized crime, and child pornographers. And even those troublemakers can use cryptography, and hide themselves... so "true names" becomes even more of an issue....

A lot has come true in this book about "cyberspace, computers, and in some their direct relations to True Names," and the novella, written more than two decades ago, has developed into a sort of icon for the Internet world. The story is included here, too.

CURIOSITY: BETTER BABY CONTESTS, The Scientific Quest For Perfect Childhood Health in the Early 20th Century, by Annette K. Vance Dorey. McFarland and Company, 1999, 271 pp., $38.50. ISBN 0-7864-0617-8

In the early part of last century, believe it or not, state fairs across the country conducted "better baby" contests. Infants were poked and prodded, weighed and measured, and then rated on scale of 1-100, 100 being "perfect." Just like making Grade A cattle, there was a movement on that, through better health and infant development, "prize babies" could be made.

The movement peaked in about 1914, then faded into obscurity.

The baby health contest identified the healthiest infants in a region "while teaching parents how breeding and environment could produce a 'superior crop,'" according to McFarland and Company.

The author is an educator specializing in teacher education and parenting issues. She researched this book in the 1990s. The book has lots of photos detailing the history of the contests, who organized some of the bureaus, and the importance of maternal education in the decades since.

KEEPING LIVESTOCK HEALTHY, Fourth Edition, by N. Bruce Haynes, DVM. Storey Books, 2001, 348 pp., $19.95. ISBN 1-58017-435-3

In the author's preface, the book, KEEPING LIVESTOCK HEALTHY, "is based on my conviction — after almost fifty years' experience in private practice, as extension veterinarian at Cornell University, and as a veterinary consultant — that the great majority of farm animal disease problems are preventable. On economic grounds alone, any sick animal — no matter how effective the treatment or how speedy the recovery — represents a loss.

"Farm animals provide us with food, fiber, financial income, and pleasure. In return, we owe them comfortable quarters, adequate feed, compassion, and good health." (page VI)

The book explains a lot about the nature of disease and how to prevent it. And the book covers a lot of ground — including overall nutrition and health, calf care, facilities, with loads of photos on proper animal husbandry. KEEPING LIVESTOCK HEALTHY should be part of every farm shelf.

Pocket Computer Handy Innovation For Herd Managers

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Dairy producers had a chance to learn the details on operating a pocket computer or "palm database" that manages their cow data during a five-hour workshop put on by the Penn State extension here Dec. 18.

"It's a way to have immediate information in the barn," said Dale Brown of Jobo Holsteins, one of several Adams County dairymen at the workshop.

The PocketDairy is offered by Dairy Record Management System (DRMS), Raleigh, N.C., in conjunction with their PCDart herd management program. It offers a wide range of easily accessible data to herd managers as they go about their work.

Vinton Smith of the Penn State extension demonstrated the array of functions available on the small computer.

Managers can instantly enter and access information on individual cows or groups of cows, including health, reproductive, and production records. Information can then easily be transferred between the PocketDairy and the PCDart computer located in the house or office.

"The functionality of (PocketDairy) is that fits into day to day work," Smith said.

Besides allowing managers to quickly check the status of individual cows, PocketDairy also allows cow data to be grouped according to specific criteria — such as cows expected to calve within one week.

Smith said the variety of PocketDairy functions can be adapted to meet the needs of different operations, including smaller herds.

Alan Zepp, who manages a 100 cow herd near New Oxford, said he has been using PocketDairy for about 3 months. The workshop helped him understand different aspects of setting up the database, he said.

For more information about palm databases for dairy applications, contact your county extension agent.

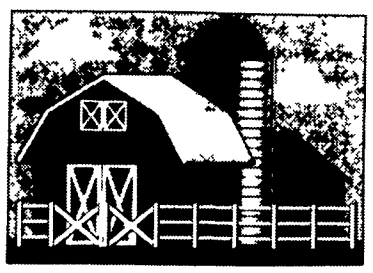
Farmers Union Urges Completion Of New Farm Bill

WASHINGTON, D.C. — During a Capitol Hill news conference and in letters to senators, the National Farmers Union (NFU) board of directors recently urged farm bill completion to reduce the need for another year of emergency ad hoc programs.

"If a farm bill is delayed another year, producers will not only need to rely on emergency economic assistance from Congress for 2002, but will also face the 2003 planting season with little certainty, since most producers will make planting decisions well before the end of the year — and before a farm bill will be enacted," stated the letter to senators signed by the 26-member NFU board.



The Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform Act of 1996 provided no safety net for agricultural producers to cushion the erratic swings in the market. In answer to depressed commodity prices, declining market opportunities and increased production costs, Congress has approved billions of dollars in economic assistance for the past five years.

"Without an adequate farm program in place this year, Congress will again have to provide emergency economic assistance for farmers next year," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "Though desperately necessary to recover from economic losses, emergency payments provide little security for lenders when producers seek credit opportunities for future crops."

Swenson represented the NFU board at a Capitol Hill news conference at which Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle and Senate Agriculture Chairman Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, discussed the proposed farm bill. The NFU board was joined by representatives of American Farm Bureau Federation and 30 other farm groups.

USDA Announces $384 Million In Funding

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman recently announced the release of more than $384 million to 41 states and Puerto Rico to help rural communities improve public schools, invest in road improvement projects, and strengthen forest stewardship programs.

"Investing in schools and education, particularly in our rural communities, is a high priority for this Administration," said Veneman. "These funds will allow local communities valuable resources so they can determine their needs and make the proper investments to help our children and strengthen rural areas."

Veneman, who was joined by Sen. Larry Craig, Idaho; Sen. Ron Wyden, Ore.; and Sen. Gordon Smith, Ore., at a press conference announcing the funds, said many states will benefit from this program, which was authorized as part of the Secure Rural Schools and Community Self-Determination Act. Oregon will receive $154 million; California, $65 million; Idaho, nearly $23 million; and Washington, approximately $44 million.

Veneman announced that over the next six years, USDA, through the Forest Service, will provide another $1.1 billion for schools and rural communities in addition to the $384 million released Thursday. These payments are the first issued under the new legislation, which returns dollars to states with national forests.

"This historic legislation helps provide important solutions to some of the challenges facing rural communities," she said. "States and local counties will make the decision on how the dollars will be spent. For example, they can buy new books, repair or expand schools or hire more teachers to help improve the education opportunities for our nation's children."

Based on legislation passed in 1908, 25 percent of Forest Service revenues from timber sales, grazing, recreation, some mineral use fees and other land use receipts go to states that host national forests. However, the Secure Rural Schools and Community Self-Determination Act of 2000 gave counties the option of staying with the traditional payment plan or choosing a predictable payment based on the average of the state's three highest payments between fiscal years 1986 and 1999.

Nationwide, counties have seen a significant drop in payments over the last decade under the traditional plan due to the significant decline in timber harvesting on national forests. The 2000 legislation stabilizes payment levels near to their historic high for six years. About 75 percent of the 700-plus counties elected to use the new formula, thus receiving increased funding.

In addition, the new legislation authorizes local resource advisory committees to give communities choice in funding forestry stewardship projects. To date, 49 resource advisory committees have been established.

Counties that receive $100,000 or more under the new legislation are required to allocate 15 to 20 percent of their funding for investments in county projects or for forest projects that implement stewardship objectives to enhance forest ecosystems or both.

USDA Conservation Program To Protect N.Y. Drinking Water

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman recently announced that the USDA is partnering with the city of Syracuse, N.Y., to safeguard the city's drinking water through a $900,000 Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program.

The program's focus is the Skaneateles Lake, one of the 11 Finger Lakes of central New York and the source of unfiltered drinking water for the 240,000 residents of Syracuse.

"This conservation program will preserve the lake's purity, benefiting local residents, tourists and the farming community," said Veneman.

The Syracuse CREP will pay farmers to remove from agricultural production up to 1,000 acres of cropland or marginal pastureland that feed the lake. The program will reimburse producers for installing and restoring riparian buffers that keep sediment, nutrients and pollutants from entering the lake. The buffers will protect water quality and provide wildlife habitat for a wide array of wildlife species, like trout and pheasant. Through these and other efforts the city is taking, Syracuse hopes to be able to continue to comply with safe drinking water standards while avoiding building a costly filtration system.

The total cost of the program is expected to reach $900,000 over 15 years. Of that amount, $650,000 will come from USDA and $250,000 from the city of Syracuse.

Lancaster County Farm Owners First To Sell Easements Through State's New Plan

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A 90-acre Mount Joy Township farm will be the first in the state to have an easement sold under the new Installment Purchase Agreement (IPA) plan offered by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The transaction is set to close on Jan. 4.

Under the IPA plan, farmers can gain tax advantages when selling their easements by deferring all or part of the purchase price — and the resulting capital gains taxes — for up to 30 years.

"Pennsylvania leads the nation in farmland preservation. We cannot preserve farmland without farmers who decide to protect their land for agricultural uses. The new Installment Purchase Agreement provides a good option for farmers who want to preserve their farmland in our statewide program," said Sam Hayes, Pa. secretary of agriculture.

Located between Mount Joy and Elizabethtown, the farm has remained in operation since the 1740s and has been in the local Kreider family for an estimated nine generations. Three siblings and their spouses currently own the property: Lois Kreider Peterman and Rev. Roy Peterman of Manheim; Dr. John and Ethel Kreider of Manheim; and Dr. Henry and Edna Kreider of Elizabethtown.

"We all have a deep attachment to this property — it's where we grew up," Lois Kreider Peterman said. "When our father gifted the property to us through his estate, we felt it was important to return the gift by preserving this valuable farmland."

She said the IPA seemed like an ideal option — enabling the Kreiders to maintain the land's farming heritage while reducing their tax liability and saving the county money in the process. By using an IPA to defer the principal payment, the county will save over $200,000 in PDA grants and gain the opportunity to apply those funds toward other farmland preservation projects.

"We had already committed to preserving the land through the Department of Agriculture's preservation program," John Kreider said. "When we learned about the IPA plan, we saw it as a good opportunity to reduce our taxes and to leave the principal behind to benefit our children and grandchildren."

The Kreiders first heard about the IPA program at a Berks County meeting led by the State Bureau of Farmland Preservation — one of many such meetings held statewide to inform farm owners of this new approach to farmland preservation.

Background On The Plan

The IPA plan is designed to enable farm owners to increase what they keep, not just what they receive, when selling easements. The sellers can opt to defer all or part of the easement's purchase price for up to 30 years and defer capital gains tax for the same period. In the interim, they receive interest twice a year on the outstanding balance. As with a municipal bond, those interest payments are exempt from federal and Pennsylvania state income taxes. Later, the sellers' heirs can choose to sell the IPAs in the municipal bond market to pay estate taxes or capital gains taxes.

Capital gains tax is due when a seller receives payment for appreciated land or other assets. Capital gain is the difference between the sale price and the value of the property when it was first bought or inherited. The IRS taxes capital gains at a maximum rate of 20 percent and Pennsylvania at a maximum 2.8 percent rate.

Howard County, Maryland, has used 30-year IPAs to buy easements on 9,200 acres from 81 sellers since 1989. Similar programs are under way in Harford and Anne Arundel counties, Maryland; Virginia Beach, Virginia; and Burlington County, New Jersey.

PDA is recommending IPAs to county farmland preservation boards because the structure minimizes cash needed to close on purchases. The rural character of many parts of Pennsylvania will be lost forever unless development rights are purchased soon. IPAs permit as many as five times more purchases in the short term than if cash was paid for each acquisition.

At the time farmers apply to their counties to sell development rights, they'll be asked to choose among on all-cash or installment purchase, or some combination of the two. After the terms of the sale are agreed upon, the purchase is submitted to PDA for approval. Closing can occur within six months of state approval.

Additional information regarding installment purchase can be obtained from each County Farmland Preservation Board, or by contacting Doug Wolfgang at the PDA's Bureau of Farmland Preservation at (717) 783-3167 or dowolfgang@state.pa.us. To discuss tax treatment of easement sales, contact Michael W. Evanish, manager of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's MSC Business Services, at (717) 731-3546 or mwevanish@pfb.com.

New Parking Facility For 2002 Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced a new parking facility for the 2002 Pennsylvania Farm Show, which will run from Saturday, Jan. 5, to Thursday, Jan. 10, at the state Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

"A new parking area was recently completed on 29 acres of state land off of Elmerton Avenue," Hayes said. "The area accommodates 2,200 vehicles, increasing the total number of parking spaces for the Farm Show complex by 1,200. About 20 shuttle buses will transport guests to and from the Elmerton Avenue lot and the Farm Show."

Hayes also said there will be slight changes in traffic patterns during this year's Farm Show. Motorists can tune in to Highway Advisory Radio (530 AM), operated by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT), to obtain timely information about traffic patterns and parking. PennDOT also advises motorists, as they near the Farm Show Complex, to pay attention to variable message signs on shoulder areas of main traffic arteries for information.

"Historic construction is under way at the Farm Show Complex," Hayes said. "Everyone on the Farm Show staff will be working hard to ensure a smooth operation."

"I encourage motorists to 'tune in' to 530 AM for traffic pattern information and carefully follow directions on signs as you approach the Farm Show Complex. An old saying fits this situation: 'temporary inconvenience, permanent improvement.'"

In September, Gov. Mark Schweiker and Hayes broke ground for a $76 million renovation and expansion project at the complex.

The Farm Show Main Exhibit Hall is the largest existing venue with 145,000 square feet of exhibit space. A new Exposition Hall will more than double the main exhibit area by adding 175,000 square feet.

The project also includes building renovations and construction of a second multipurpose arena and a new equine center. When completed, total exhibit space will increase from 660,000 square feet to more than one million square feet. The new equine center will house 140 horses and will be connected to the new arena and the existing complex.

For directions to the Farm Show Complex and the Elmerton Avenue parking facility, as well as a complete schedule or more information, visit the Agriculture Department's Website through the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or directly at www.pda.state.pa.us.

'Decisions 2002' Seminar Jan. 29

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — The year 2001 might go down in history as the most traumatic year for many farmers, particularly those who have not put much emphasis on marketing.

Management of farm businesses is taking more time and concentration with specialized talents. Agriculture is rapidly becoming more specialized in the areas of financial management, agronomics, animal science, and commodity marketing.

When will farm prices start back up? More importantly, how can you profit from price moves?

These and other questions will be addressed by the "Decisions 2002" seminar on Jan. 29 at the Days Inn and Conference Center on Rt. 309 outside of Allentown.

The "Decisions 2002" Seminar will be providing effective market analysis and marketing strategies for all innovative producers. Featured speaker, Scott Davis, is internationally known for his agricultural marketing insight. Davis started on a progressive grain and livestock farm in Iowa and was graduated from Iowa State University. He has been with Pro Farmer since 1991 where he is senior market analyst. Davis writes a daily marketing column at AgWeb and Pro Farmer Today.

Paul Deanno, KYW-TV meteorologist, will discuss the long-term weather forecast. Deanno will outline the weather implications for this region, the midwest, and the world. Deanno is a Philadelphia native and was graduated from Syracuse University. In addition to his award-winning weather broadcasting, Paul produces the KYW-3 weathercasts and environmental reports.

Contact John Berry, agricultural marketing agent at (610) 391-9840 or jwb15@psu.edu for additional information.

Fifty-Eight Counties Eligible For USDA Emergency Farm Loans

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman has named 58 counties in Pennsylvania as eligible for USDA emergency farm loans due to losses caused by very low precipitation during the summer of 2001.

"Low precipitation during the growing season causes many challenges for producers," said Veneman. "These loans will help producers minimize the impact of production losses."

Adams, Allegheny, Armstrong, Beaver, Bedford, Berks, Blair, Butler, Cambria, Centre, Chester, Clarion, Clearfield, Clinton, Columbia, Cumberland, Dauphin, Elk, Erie, Forest, Franklin, Fulton, Huntingdon, Indiana, Jefferson, Juniata, Lancaster, Lawrence, Lebanon, Lycoming, Mercer, Mifflin, Montour, Northumberland, Perry, Schuylkill, Snyder, Somerset, Union, Venango, Warren, Washington, Westmoreland, and York counties were named as primary disaster areas on Dec. 5. Also eligible because they are contiguous are Bradford, Cameron, Carbon, Crawford, Delaware, Fayette, Greene, Lehigh, Luzerne, McKean, Montgomery, Potter, Sullivan, and Tioga counties.

This designation makes all qualified farm operators in primary and contiguous disaster counties eligible for low-interest EM loans from the Farm Service Agency, provided eligibility requirements are met. Farmers in eligible counties have eight months from the date of this declaration to apply for the loans to help cover part of their actual losses. FSA will consider each loan application on its own merits, taking into account the extent of losses, security available, and repayment ability.

FSA has a variety of programs available, in addition to the emergency loan program, to help eligible farmers recover from adversity. Interested farmers may contact their local FSA offices for further information on eligibility requirements and application procedures. Additional information is also available online at: http://www.fsa.usda.gov/pas/disaster/assistance1.htm.

hundredweight nationally. It also sets a target price of $14.25 per hundredweight for Class III with CCC payments making up 25 percent of the difference between the target price and the market price when the market price falls below $14.25 per hundred weight of milk. The National Dairy Trust Fund also makes provisions for the WIC program so as not to have a negative impact on poor children. Some politicians have called this the most imaginative effort to overcome regionalism in years.

Sen. Santorum said that this would effectively be a "$.25 per gallon tax." He called it a very bad idea to tax a staple like that. "What Senator Santorum failed to mention," said PDPDC of FFD Chairman Gerald Carlin, "Is that market prices in recent months have been higher than the target prices in the Farm Bill. If Senator Santorum wants to honestly debate the topic, he should use real figures. The Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact raised class I farm prices an average of $.08 per gallon with the rest of the increase coming from the processing and retailing sectors. Retail milk prices across the country have increased roughly the same amount as in the compact states. Senator Santorum has also failed to acknowledge the ever-widening gap between farm and retail prices. Senator Santorum and many others hide behind the theories of Penn State University's processor apologist Ken Bailey."

Senator Santorum has made the excuse publicly in farm meetings that it is hard to get meaningful dairy legislation passed because of politicians in other parts of the country. Now, however, the Senator has joined the loud choir of those who are proclaiming outrageous lies and distortions in order to discredit any attempt to bring price stability to financially stressed dairy farmers.

The Leahy dairy language was deleted and replaced by a very different and watered-down version. Even this was too much for Sen. Santorum to accept as he supported the Roberts-Cochran amendment that would have wiped out the compromise dairy language. "He has supported corporate agriculture over family farms at every opportunity in this Farm Bill debate," said Carlin.

Charlotte Gelnett, Snyder County, enlists the aid of her husband Richard in preparing between 50-60 items to enter in Pennsylvania Farm Show's family living competition. For the Gelnetts, entries require year-round preparation for the annual Harrisburg event scheduled next week from Jan. 5-10. Her entries include many canned and dried fruits and vegetables, baked goods, quilts, and sewing projects.

Consistent Farm Show Champion Shares Winning Secret

LOU ANN GOOD

MIDDLEBURG (Snyder Co.) — When some of the same names appear year after year as top winners at Pennsylvania Farm Show, many observers whisper there must be a secret for winning.

There is. Charlotte Gelnett is one of those people who wins consistently. In fact she stashes bags of ribbons garnered from her cooking, baking, and sewing projects into her attic each year.

Charlotte is eager to share the secret — a five letter word — ENTER.

"If you don't enter (competitions), you can't win," she said.

"You never know if you might win. Sometimes you're certain a project is sure to take a blue ribbon — but it doesn't — and the next time, you're certain it won't even place, and it takes a blue ribbon," Charlotte said of her experiences.

Getting ready for the Pennsylvania Farm Show requires year-round preparation for Charlotte. She estimates that she annually enters 50-60 items in competition. Her entries in the family living area include jellies, canned and dried vegetables and fruits, pies, cakes, quilts, and clothing.

Charlotte never bothers to count how many ribbons she has won. Instead she stuffs the prize ribbons into paper bags and stores them in her attic.

"Ribbons are more important to kids. For me, I get my pleasure out of using the stuff," Charlotte said of such things as her prized raspberry jelly and dried tomatoes.

Charlotte is probably best known for her apple pie. She has placed second three times in the well-publicized Blue Ribbon Apple Pie Contest. Each year she enters the same recipe, confident that another year, another judge might be all that is needed to claim the top $100 prize.

On Saturday, she plans to arise at 3 a.m. to bake an apple pie to take to the 10 a.m. contest. This might be her year. Even if she doesn't win the blue ribbon for her apple pie, she is certain to win plenty of them for many of the other items she enters.

Because Charlotte had no intentions of going to college, she took two class periods of home economics everyday in high school. That provided a solid foundation for excelling in cooking, baking, and sewing.

After Charlotte married her high school sweetheart Richard, they had three children. Charlotte gained lots of expertise in cooking, sewing, and baking for her family.

It wasn't until nine years ago that Charlotte began entering items in the fair. At the 1993 Beaver Fair, Charlotte entered a apple pie. "It wasn't anything fancy because I think plain apple is best," Charlotte said of her entry.

The judges agreed. Because her pie placed first at the local level, she qualified for the state competition, where she placed second.

Every year since then, Charlotte has been entering an apple pie plus many other items. Some of these include canned grape juice, cherries, red and black raspberries, red beets, salsa, and numerous dried produce such as parsley, corn, tomatoes, potatoes, flat beans, peaches, apricots, and others.

"It's like a family reunion. We (contestants) get to know each other while we wait," Charlotte said of the judging process. "We are all friends and don't get upset at other for winning."

"I'm known as the 'lady from Middleburg,'" Charlotte said of the 10 county fairs she attends. The Gelnetts' children and 11

These quilts are a few of more than a hundred Charlotte has stitched and entered in competition. At left is this year's entry, a machine quilted alphabet quilt made of veivet. The other two quilts were entered in previous years, and show how Charlotte improvises traditional patterns by using three-dimensional flowers.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

Seems almost silly, now.

Two years ago, the world was in a computerized frantic-panic over "Y2K," an acronym now burned into our collective language. Now, we end another year having further broadened our lingo — and world geography smarts — with the likes of "burka," "Taliban" and "Tora Bora."

Utilizing these geopolitical language lessons, this column is announcing its first (and hopefully last) "Feedbin Laden" awards, bestowed on people and things that have really "ticked us off" lately. This award is a miniature replica of the galvanized metal one sitting up behind the barn and will be appropriately filled with desert dust.

We award our first to the weather of 2001, which diligently sought a place in history as the driest on record around here. It apparently missed by a few raindrops worth, but we'll present it a Feedbin Laden Award anyway. The desert dust will be especially appropriate.

Next we honor those (hopefully few!) "creative" folks who tried to personally benefit in any way from the tragic events of Sept. 11. Along with their Feedbin Laden trophy, we offer them tickets for a one-way trip to the hideout caves of Tora Bora.

Feedbin Laden trophies galore go out to citizens who steadfastly refuse to be participants in our democracy with their persistent absence at the voting polls (with exception and due respect to our friends who do so because of religious belief). To those who complain, but don't participate by voting in our democracy, simply by laziness, we offer a trip to live for awhile in Argentina. No return guaranteed.

On a smaller and more local level, our next award goes to those folks who still insist on burning leaves despite our continuing county ban on outside burning. We suggest their Feedbin Laden trophy be presented by a personal visit from local fire officials.

Not to forget a special Feedbin Laden presentation we'd like to make in person to the manager of a retail store we sometimes patronize. During our most recent visit, she publicly ridiculed an employee, while being rude to other customers. Along with her award, we offer her a badly-needed copy of Dale Carnegie's "How To Win Friends and Influence People."

Now that we have that out of our system, let's end the year on a more upbeat note. Thus, we are eager to also award our first Whipped Cream salutes, named for that special, festive, luscious topping (real cream, of course!) to those folks and things that add a rich dollop of sweetness to life's daily ups and downs.

First of all, a Whipped Cream Award to the weather of 2001. Yes, we know that's redundant. But, what little rain it did send us fell at expeditious times to as least grow adequate crops to give The Girls full bellies. Thank You.

Next, of course, we must bestow a whopping-big Whipped Cream honor on the heroes, known and unknown, of 9-11. God bless you all.

Our next Whipped Cream honor goes to folks who are not afraid to "think out of the box." We're thinking here of people like those who are working to get an ethanol plant in York County with the aim of raising grain crop prices. People who have brought us everything from paper clips to cancer cures, who go looking for alternative energy forms, improved transportation, better health, even those experimenting with robotic milkers for cows. Go for it, all of you inventive free-thinkers.

A heartfelt and grateful Whipped Cream (with a cherry on top!) Award to all you folks out there who serve your communities as volunteers. You know who you are: literacy tutors and meals-on-wheels deliverers, firefighters and blood donors, hospital nursery baby-rockers, youth organization leaders, visitors to the lonely, those who help the homeless, and this list could go on and on.

And, finally, a high-five salute with the Whipped Cream to the driver of a battered blue station wagon I waited behind at a traffic light moments after leaving the retail store supervised by the manager from...you know. Decorating the rear compartment of the well-worn car was a life-sized, lit-up Santa, while strings of lights and candles brightened the windows on each side. My attitude leaped from Grinch-y to grinning in an instant and I chuckled the whole way home.

Our wish to you and yours, for 2002, is that the Feedbin Ladens of the world collapse in a heap of dust and that your life be filled with lots of Whipped Cream moments!

Quilt Workshops Upcoming

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Get ready to rock and roll with quilting at this Penn State Cooperative Extension workshop. Participants will apply the log cabin technique to make a unique wall hanging. Participants will work with both even and uneven log cabin blocks, which can be arranged in several ways to obtain multiple design effects. A supply list will be sent when registration is received.

This workshop will be conducted at the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster on Wednesday evenings from 6:30 p.m.-8:30 p.m. on Jan. 9, 16, and 23 or Friday mornings from 9:30 a.m.-11:30 a.m., Jan. 11, 18, and 25. Cost is $35. Instructor is Carol Lee Shirk.

Preregistration is requested. Call Penn State Extension at (717) 394-6851 for information.

Farm Show Champion

grandchildren often attend the Farm Show with them.

Each year, new contestants enter, and friendship horizons expand.

"Some of the local fairs can't afford to give much for premiums, but the Farm Show premiums make it really worthwhile," Charlotte said.

"Everyone envies her," Richard said of his wife. The extension agent transports Charlotte's entries and those from other Snyder Countians to the Farm Show. This is a big benefit for those who live several hours' drive from Harrisburg. The entries must be entered two days before the competition begins and many people simply don't have the time to drive to the complex and to pick up the entries at the end of Farm Show.

Nonetheless, the Gelnetts must take the entries to their county extension office. Richard has worked hard over the years to figure out the best way to transport the entries. He has shelves built in his pickup truck, and boxes in which a circle is cut out into which he inserts containers to keep the stuff from sliding around.

For the apple pie contest conducted Saturday morning, Jan. 5, Charlotte arises at 3 a.m. to bake her pie. If the roads are not icy, the couple will leave their home at 7 a.m. to arrive in time for the 10 a.m. contest.

A few years, the roads were so icy or snow-covered that the Gelnetts feared they wouldn't be able to drive the distance safely.

The Gelnetts' 129-acre farm sits between two mountains. Richard estimates that their farm has been in his side of the family for about 100 years.

Although the apple pie and Hershey's Chocolate Cake and Cookie Contests require contestants to win first place at a county fair before qualifying for state competition, most of the categories in the family living area do not require that or even preregistration. In fact, someone reading this article can decide to enter simply by showing up with a project on Jan. 3, between 8 a.m.-4 p.m.

Although the Farm Show does not have a casserole category, some local fairs do. Here is one of Charlotte's recipe that took first place at the Bloomsburg Fair.

Chicken Casserole

1 cup chicken
1 cup rice
1 cup peas
1 cup diced, steamed celery in butter
¼ cup onion
¾ cup mayonnaise
½ cup almonds (optional)
1 can chopped water chestnuts
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 cup crushed cornflakes
¼ stick butter

Combine chicken, rice, peas, celery, onion, mayonnaise, almonds, water chestnuts, and soup. Top with crushed cornflakes and melted butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes.

Holiday Traditions

What a wonderful time of the year this can be. We all tend to remember the special things that happened when we were children. As we get older and our families grow we try to duplicate many of the happy memories for our children and ourselves. This is known as traditions — the passing down of elements of a culture from generation to generation. At the 2000 Lebanon Holiday program I ask participants to write down a favorite tradition. I want to share some of those ideas with you. Your family may already do some of these special things — or you may think it is such a good idea that you will try it, and it may become a tradition in your family.

• We have a Crazy Cousins Craft Day twice a year. We all get together and make some craft from start to finish. We either have a big breakfast, or a big lunch and just spend the day having a great time.

• An Advent wreath.

• I read a related storybook to my children each night to count down the days before Christmas. I wrap each book (25 of them) in Christmas paper.

• Every year we baked hundreds of cookies and prepare containers for gifts for family and friends.

• Get name from our local school of a needy family and give them food or gift certificate. We remain anonymous.

• Cutting our own Christmas tree, taking pictures of sawing down the tree and "dragging" it to the truck. Gathering the family together and reading the Christmas story from the Bible either before or after we open gifts.

• We decorate our tree while playing Mannheim Steamroller Christmas music and videotapes. Mother always put tangerines and walnuts in our Christmas stockings, and I have continued this for our family.

• For many years after decorating the house for Christmas, we dress in our "jammies" and drive around town looking at lights. We sing and roll down the windows to feel the cold. We come back and have sticky buns and hot chocolate.

• Hang a key on the front door so Santa can come in! (We don't have a fireplace.)

• Have a steak and shrimp dinner, attend church and exchange gifts on Christmas Eve.

• On Christmas Eve is the traditional reading of the Christmas story by Grandpa of the Christmas story from St. Luke's. On Christmas Day we have an ice cream birthday cake for Jesus.

• "Russian" Christmas Eve: Dinner on the eve of the Russian Christmas celebrated in January — serve 12 meatless dishes (you might include stewed prunes, sauerkraut, peorgies, doughballs - bread and butter counts as one item).

• On Christmas Day we celebrate with the English family traditions. We eat roast beef with Yorkshire pudding and have "Christmas crackers." The whole family wears their party hats for dinner.

• It is a tradition to decorate our trees with homemade ornaments. I always make one for each family member.

• The cousins exchange homemade ornaments every year. It's a challenge to come up with new and different ideas.

• When my grandmother died, she owned a gold pennant watch. There were three granddaughters. Each Christmas Eve, my aunt has our whole family for dinner. After dinner, the first gift we exchange is Grandma's watch. The granddaughter keeps it for a year and brings it back Christmas Eve.

• Christmas Eve: Sit by the fire and take turns reading all the holiday letters and sharing pictures and cards; talk about old friends and relatives that we rarely see. Helps our children know about these old friends and relatives far away.

• When family members are in need due to illness, loss of job, etc. we create a money tree that all members contribute to — as they are able. Nobody feels bad if they can only give a little because the total and love it shows is the best pick-me-upper one can get.

• Christmas Day we play the game "Now you have it, now you don't," with a $5 gift. This is in place of exchanging gifts.

• A family Christmas breakfast before opening gifts.

• Put all your holiday cards in a special basket. After New Year's pull several cards each day. Remember these dear ones in prayer and with a card or letter.

• Always have pork and sauerkraut, mashed potatoes, and applesauce on New Year's Day.

Eat Well During The Holidays

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — With all the holiday celebrations that focus on food, so often we experience a sense of frustration wondering how do I eat well and still enjoy all of the special holiday foods?

Good news. You don't have to adopt a feast or famine philosophy to keep from overindulging.

"The key to maintaining a healthy diet any time of year is balance, variety and moderation and the holidays are no exception," said Mary K. Young, M.S., R.D., executive director of nutrition for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association.

Think about how you eat over a period of time, not just one day or one meal. Following are some of Young's tips to help you through the season healthfully.

• Enjoy all foods — just don't overdo it. Plan ahead. If you're attending a party tonight, don't splurge during the day. Eat small but nutritious meals throughout the day so you won't be starving when you arrive at the party.

• At the party, remember that some of your favorite holiday foods are also wise choices when it comes to choosing foods that are nutrient-rich, yet lower in calories.

(For example, three ounces of lean beef contribute less than 10 percent of calories to a 2,000 calorie diet, yet it supplies more than 10 percent of the Daily Value for 9 essential nutrients including protein, zinc, vitamin B12, niacin, vitamin B6 and iron.)

• Eat smaller portions of the more decadent holiday foods.

• Choose nutritious weeknight meals that the whole family can enjoy. Include a variety of foods each day such as whole grain breads, dairy products, colorful fruits and vegetables and lean beef. There are eight beef cuts classified as lean according to USDA designations. They are: eye round; top round; round tip; top sirloin; bottom round; top loin; tenderloin; and flank steak.

• Think of fat as a balancing act. Balance high fat and lowfat options over time.

• Take advantage of foods cooked by methods that don't require the addition of any or very little extra fat such as broiling, roasting and stir-frying when you're looking for great weeknight meal during the holidays.

Try serving Stir-Fried Steak & Vegetable Sandwiches. Lean round tip steaks are cut into strips and stir-fried with fresh vegetables then piled into a roll mozzarella cheese.

Stir-Fried Steak And Vegetable Sandwiches

1 pound beef round tip steak, cut ⅛ to ¼ inch thick
1 teaspoon olive oil
1 medium zucchini, cut into ¼-inch-thick slices
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 medium red bell pepper, cut into thin strips
1 teaspoon Italian seasoning, crushed
1 teaspoon olive oil
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 crusty hoagie rolls (approx. 6 inches long each), split
4 slices (¾ ounce each) mozzarella cheese

1. Stack beef steaks; cut lengthwise in half, then crosswise into 1-inch-wide strips. Set aside.

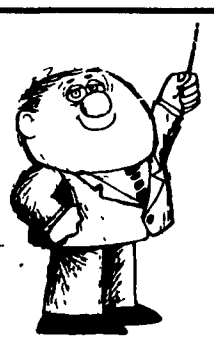
2. In large skillet, heat 1 teaspoon olive oil over medium-high heat until hot. Add zucchini, onion, bell pepper and Italian seasoning. Stir-fry 3 to 4 minutes or until crisp-tender. Remove from skillet.

3. In same skillet, heat 1 teaspoon oil until hot. Stir-fry beef in 2 batches, 1 to 2 minutes each, or until outside surface is no longer pink. (Do not overcook). Return beef to skillet. Season with salt and pepper. Stir in zucchini mixture; heat through.

4. Arrange ¼ of beef mixture on bottom of each roll; top each with 1 cheese slice. Place on rack in broiler pan so surface of cheese is 4 inches from heat. Broil 1 to 2 minutes or until cheese is melted. Close sandwiches.

Makes 4 servings.

Stir-Fried Steak and Vegetable Sandwiches make a nutritious, quick meal. Round tip steaks are lean and cook very quickly.



A lesson well learned...

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Just a few more days in this year and then we must remember to write 2002 on our checks.

We've gotten quite a few calendars again this year. I appreciate the one small one for a table or desk. Not only do businesses give calendars to advertise but charitable organizations do too. When you get three calendars in one day from the same place it is time to tell them to take some addresses off their list.

When I complained to one organization, a personal letter came from an officer of the charity. But, I still get too many letters from them. When someone calls and mispronounces your name, it is certain to be a telemarketer. One cartoon showed them saying, "If you are not eating dinner now, I'll call back when you are eating."

Some calendars are so very pretty and I hate to throw them away. They would make a nice scrapbook of beautiful pictures. As a child, my mother had me paste pictures in a scrapbook but at that time they did not cost $20 or $30 dollars each.

At the end of the year, I put all of the 2001 photographs in a book. Each family is grouped together. Because I didn't have many from one family, they sent me some. They had traveled to the state of Oregon and took some pictures in California, too, this summer.

It is good that we don't know what the New Year will bring. At our age it seems that health is an important subject. You do not realize how many specialists there are until you have to start using their services. I suppose wintertime is a good time to be confined to your house. My husband is hoping that by springtime he will be able to work outside again.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Cumberland County Dairy Club Meets

The Cumberland County 4-H Dairy Club met on Dec. 10 at the Cumberland County Extension Office in Carlisle. President Aaron Corman called the meeting to order. Scott Walton led the American Pledge and Janel Zinn led the 4-H pledge. Roll call was answered by what is your favorite animal's name.

Sarah Wickard read the minutes. They were approved as read. The treasurer's report was given and approved. John Ocker made comments about the banquet and Aaron Corman reported about the 4-H Congress.

The program was Toys For Tots. Jim Washington, from the Marines, attended to pick up the toys that the club had brought, instead of a 4-H gift exchange that night.

Demonstrations were given by Rob and Clay Weber. Rob's demonstration was on proper gun cleaning and Clay's demonstration was on the White-Tailed Deer.

The next meeting will be Feb. 11, 2002 at the Second Presbyterian Church in Carlisle.

York County Conservation Announces 2001 Scholarship Winner

YORK (York Co.) — The York County Conservation District has awarded its $500 Annual Scholarship Award to Amanda Schott, a sophomore at Penn State York majoring in Horticulture with a 3.9 grade point average. Her objective is to secure a position within the horticulture industry and utilize her skills in farming and horticulture.

During her high school career, Schott participated in the York County Envirothon, which she said, allowed her the opportunity to learn more about something that she loved, nature. While a member of the Envirothon team Amanda devised and taught environmental lessons to fourth grade students as part of an Environmental Field Day.

Hunting for wildflowers became Schott's passion and eventually led her to maintaining PP&L's butterfly garden, which switched her focus from wildflowers to the broader field of gardening. She hopes that someday this will lead to a career in greenhouse or nursery production, which would include flowering plants as well as vegetables.

She is a member of York County's 4-H Poultry Club and Airville's 4-H Community Club. In addition she completed an independent study that involved implementing habitat improvements within a given area to attract woodpeckers.

Amanda is the daughter of Donna and John Schott Jr. She graduated in 2000 from Red Lion High School.

FRESH PEAR, HAZELNUT AND DRIED CHERRY SUNBURST

This soft pastry dough must be very cold when handled. Dried cranberries may be used in place of cherries. Serves 12.

Dough:

2½ cups unbleached white flour
6 tablespoons butter, room temperature, cut into ½-inch pieces
2 tablespoons powdered dry milk
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup warm water
¼-ounce package active dry yeast
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 whole large egg
2 egg yolks, divided

Place flour, butter, powdered dry milk, and salt in bowl of food processor fitted with dough blade; pulse several times. Stir warm water, yeast, and sugar together in glass measuring cup. Let stand until foamy, about 3 minutes. Stir in whole egg and one egg yolk.

With machine running, slowly pour yeast mixture through feed tube. Let mixture form a ball and process 60-90 seconds or until dough is smooth and slightly warm. Form a ball and place in greased bowl. Cover tightly with foil; refrigerate 6-12 hours.

Filling:

1 tablespoon butter
2 fresh, ripe pears, peeled, cored, and diced in ¼-inch pieces
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
½ cup brown sugar, divided
½ cup dried tart cherries
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 teaspoons finely sliced lemon peel
4 ounces softened cream cheese
½ cup coarsely chopped, roasted hazelnuts

Melt butter in medium skillet. Add pears, lemon juice and ¼ cup brown sugar. Simmer over medium-low heat, stirring often, until most liquid has been reduced, about 2 minutes. Drain mixture through fine sieve, reserve liquid. Set pears aside. Return liquid to skillet and simmer, stirring constantly, until syrupy and reduced to several tablespoons. Remove from heat and stir in reserved pears, dried cherries, vanilla extract and lemon peel. Cool. Meanwhile, mix remaining ¼ cup brown sugar with softened cream cheese.

Punch dough down, turn onto lightly floured surface and divide into two equal parts.

Roll out one piece of dough into 12-inch circle. Refrigerate remaining dough. Place dough on lightly greased 12-inch pizza-type pan. Spread cream cheese mixture to within ½-inch of edge.

Spoon cooled pear mixture evenly over cream cheese. Sprinkle with hazelnuts. Whisk egg yolks with one tablespoon cold water and pinch of salt; lightly brush edges with mixture, reserving some egg yolk mixture.

Roll remaining dough into 12-inch circle and place over filling. Gently press edges together. Using 2-inch biscuit cutter make outline of a circle in center of top dough only. Do not cut through bottom dough. With scissors, starting in the center of top dough only. Do not cut through bottom dough. With scissors, starting in center of top pastry, snip six small pie-shaped wedges, ending at outline of circle. Lay points open to expose a circle of filling and to form sunburst pattern.

With knife or pizza cutter, starting at outer edge of pastry, cut 16 4-inch long pie-shaped wedges, cutting through both layers. Give each wedge a twist to form sunburst pattern. Cover with oiled plastic wrap and let rise until slight indentation remains when lightly pressed with fingertips, about 30-45 minutes.

Brush pastry with remaining egg yolk mix. Bake on center rack in 375 degree oven until golden, about 20 minutes. Cool slightly. Drizzle with powdered sugar icing.

To enhance hazelnut flavor, spread shelled nuts on cookie sheet and roast at 275 degrees for 20-30 minutes until skins crack, stirring occasionally. To remove skins, rub nuts briskly while warm with rough terry towel.

Delights To Usher In The New Year

HAZELNUT ENCRUSTED SALMON

16-ounce fresh salmon fillet, boned and skinned
Salt
¼ cup fresh lemon juice, divided
6 tablespoons butter, room temperature
1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill weed
⅓ cup grated fresh Parmesan cheese
⅓ cup toasted bread crumbs
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup coarsely chopped, roasted hazelnuts

Heat oven to 450 degrees. With sharp knife, slice salmon in half horizontally to within ½ inch of the sides and back, forming a pocket. Lightly salt top and center of fish. Brush with 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Place on shallow baking pan.

In small bowl, whisk butter until smooth; stir in parsley, dill weed, remaining lemon juice. Spread half the butter mixture in pocket and half on top of fish. Stir parmesan, bread crumbs, ¼ teaspoon salt and roasted hazelnuts into remaining butter. Pat mixture evenly on top of fish.

Bake at 450 degrees until firm, 10-15 minutes, depending upon thickness. Broil approximately one minute, until top is bubbling and lightly browned.

To enhance hazelnut flavor, spread shelled nuts on cookie sheet and roast at 275 degrees for 20-30 minutes until skins crack, stirring occasionally. To remove skins, rub nuts briskly while warm with rough terry cloth.

POACHED PEARS WITH CHOCOLATE HAZELNUT FILLING AND RASPBERRY SAUCE

¼ cup, plus 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice, divided
4 fresh, ripe whole pears, peeled, cored, stems removed
3 cups water
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cinnamon stick
6 whole cloves
Chocolate hazelnut filling, recipe follows
Chocolate sauce, recipe follows
Raspberry sauce, recipe follows
Chocolate leaves for garnish

Rub pears with one tablespoon lemon juice. In a 2-quart saucepan, bring water, sugar, cinnamon stick, and cloves to boil. Remove from heat and add ¼ cup lemon juice. Place pears in warm liquid for several minutes, until slightly softened.

Rapidly chill pears and liquid by placing pan in bowl of ice water. Weigh pears down with small plate to completely cover with liquid. Refrigerate until used, up to 12 hours.

Chocolate Hazelnut Filling:

¼ cup heavy cream
4 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, finely chopped
¼ cup finely ground roasted hazelnuts
1 tablespoon pear juice

Heat cream to simmering, add chocolate and stir until melted. Stir in hazelnuts and pear juice. Let stand until slightly thickened.

Chocolate Sauce:

½ cup heavy whipping cream
6 ounces chopped semi-sweet chocolate
1 tablespoon pear juice

Heat cream to simmering. Add chocolate and stir until melted. Stir in pear juice and let stand until of thick pouring consistency.

Raspberry Sauce:

16 ounces sweetened, frozen raspberries
2 tablespoons raspberry juice

Heat berries in one-quart saucepan to simmering. Force mixture through sieve or juicer. Return juice to saucepan; discard solids. Add additional sugar, if desired. Simmer over medium high heat until liquid is reduced by one-half. Cool and stir in raspberry juice.

To serve: Remove pears from liquid and pat dry. Using ½-inch round pastry tube, fill center of pear with chocolate hazelnut filling. Cut a small slice off the bottom of pears so they stand upright, and center each pear in pool of raspberry sauce. Drizzle with chocolate sauce, add chocolate leaf.

Note: To make chocolate leaves coat the underside (veined side) of small nontoxic leaves with melted confectioners' coating chocolate. When firm, gently pull the leaf away from the chocolate. To enhance hazelnut flavor, spread shelled nuts on cookie sheet and roast at 275 degrees for 20-30 minutes until skins crack, stirring occasionally. To remove skins, rub nuts briskly while warm with rough terry towel.

One of the critical factors in controlling bacteria in food is controlling temperature: pathogenic microorganisms grow very slowly at low temperatures: multiply rapidly in mid-range temperatures, and are killed at high temperatures. For safety, foods must be held at proper cold temperatures in refrigerators or freezers and they must be cooked thoroughly.

It is essential to use a thermometer when cooking meat and poultry to prevent under cooking and foodborne illness. Using a thermometer is the only reliable way to ensure safety and to determine the "doneness" of most foods.

To be safe, a product must be cooked to an internal temperature high enough to destroy any harmful bacteria that may have been in the food. Doneness refers to a food being cooked to the desired state, and indicates the sensory aspects of foods such as texture, appearance, and juiciness. Unlike the temperatures required for safety, these sensory aspects are subjective.

Many food handlers believe that visible indicators, such as color changes in the food, can be relied upon to determine that foods have been cooked to an endpoint that ensures bacterial destruction. However, recent research has shown that color and texture indicators are not reliable. For example, ground beef may turn brown before it has reached a temperature at which bacteria are destroyed. A person preparing hamburger and depending on visual signs to determine safety by using the brown color as an indicator is taking a chance that pathogenic microorganisms may survive. A hamburger cooked to 160F, regardless of color, is safe.

The temperature at which different pathogenic bacteria are destroyed varies, as does the "doneness" temperature for different meat and poultry products. A roast or steak that has never been pierced in any way during slaughter, processing or preparation, and has reached an internal temperature of 145 F is safe to eat. A person looking for a visual sign of doneness might continue to cook it until it was over-cooked and dry. A person using a thermometer can feel reassured the food has reached a safe temperature.

Likewise, poultry should reach at least 160F throughout for safety. At this temperature the meat has not reached a traditional "done" texture and color (the red color of poultry does not change to the expected cooked color of white until temperatures are well above 160F), and many people prefer to cook it longer to higher temperatures.

A thermometer should also be used to ensure that cooked foods are held at a safe temperature (below 40 F or above 140F) until served.

Types of Thermometers —Food thermometers come in several types and styles, and range in level of technology and price.

- Oven-safe Bimetallic-coil Thermometers: This type of thermometer is familiar to most consumers. This is the traditional meat thermometer designed to be placed in a food before it goes into the oven. It is generally used for large items such as a roast or turkey.
- Bimetallic-coil "Instant Read" Thermometers: These thermometers are designed to quickly measure the temperature and cannot be left in the oven while the food is cooking. About 15 to 20 seconds are required for the temperature to be accurately displayed on a dial.

Once the temperature is determined, the thermometer must be removed. It is important to wash the probe with hot, soapy water after each insertion to prevent cross-contamination. Since it has a long, thin probe, this thermometer is appropriate for measuring the temperatures of items less than three inches thick, like hamburger patties and chicken breasts.

- Thermistors: Thermistor-style thermometers can register a temperature in about 10 seconds, and are suited for use with thin and thick foods. As with the instant-read thermometers, the thermistors should be placed in the food toward the end of cooking time, not left in for the duration.

Make a New Year's resolution now and start using a food thermometer.

Gifts You Can Give Children Year-Round

The gifts have all been opened and much of the anticipation is over. For children and adults this can be a big let down. Now can be the time to focus on "other" gifts you give to your children.

These gifts are not usually found on a child's gift list. Yet later in life, if asked about the gifts a person cherishes most, these will be likely listed:

- The gift of a parent's attention. Few of life's many pleasures are greater than knowing that someone is giving you full attention. It is even better if the attention giving happens on regular occasions.
- The gift of talent to share. A child with a talent to share has a greater chance of being accepted into wholesome friendship groups. Self-esteem is enhanced and opportunity knocks much more frequently among those with talents to share. The talent might come from extra effort and opportunity provided for private lessons in music, athletics or some other special interest that the child may express.
- The gift of sense of humor. Everyone, regardless of age, can benefit from a good belly laugh at least once a day. Humor makes the down parts of life that we all experience more palatable. Humor can help heal many of life's real or imagined illnesses.
- The gift of hope in tomorrow. Our world has its share of problems. The news is full of human sorrows and sufferings. Making plans on how to make tomorrow a better day will brighten today.
- The gift of being loved. We will survive better if we know and are told and shown on a regular basis that we are loved. Knowledge that we are loved is recognized by the recipient when kind words are spoken and acts of service are rendered without being assigned.
- The gift of your time. Most of us, regardless of our age, cherish the time we spent with significant adults. A person recently told me the best gift he ever received was a coupon for 15 minutes of his father's time once each week for a year.
- The gift of "roots." A feeling of rootedness comes in many ways. It is best seen in memories of the past that are occasionally recalled, written family histories, relatives who care and make contact regularly, parents who are respected by others and people who say frequently they are proud to belong to this family.
- The gift of values to guide behavior. The things we see as important to others are often the things we adopt as important to us. Parents who demonstrate such values as a healthy balance between work and play, honesty, charity toward others, respect for the elderly, love of God, love of country, appreciation of self and many other such items of high value, give children guidelines of things that bring people happiness.

Remember more is caught than taught in parent-child relationships. Actions often speak louder than words.

- The gift of a violence free home. Home does not need to be a violent place. Few, if any lessons of life that are worthwhile are taught with violence. Violence only momentarily changes behavior. Lasting changes in behavior come with love, praise, and consistent parental guidance.
- The gift of responsible use of substances. Irresponsible use of substances is all around us. People misuse alcohol, smoke tobacco, use illegal drugs and misuse legal drugs that are made to heal and help. What greater gift could a parent give a child than to stop smoking and use all substances responsibly?

ANSWER — M. Long of Maryland wanted to know why water comes to the top of her pumpkin pie filling after it is baked and becomes cold. She uses the Libby pumpkin pie recipe. Thanks to Emma Sue Martin for writing that she noticed that pumpkin pies tend to become watery if baked in too high heat or too long. It doesn't matter what brand of pumpkin is used. She writes: bake at 400 degrees for 10 minutes only, reduce heat to 325 degrees. Bake until center is almost set, filling may wiggle a bit in the center, but will set as it cools.

ANSWER — Bonnie Koons, Harrisburg, requested a recipe for pork barbecue that is either pulled or shredded. Thanks to a Wolmesdorf reader for sending this recipe. For a better tasting barbecue, she prefers to simmer this in a crockpot on low for 6-8 hours.

Two New Contests Open At Pennsylvania Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Win $100 for your best holiday tree ornament with a rural motif, or for your most beautiful decorative wreath. These are the two newest contests being promoted in the Family Living area of the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Gerri Moore, chairman of Family Living, reports that the $100 prize for both contests will be the most money ever awarded in the craft department.

Ornaments must have a rural theme. They can be crafted from eight different mediums. They include sewn or quilted, knitted or crocheted, needlepoint or embroidery, tatted, or smocked, plastic canvas, wood or miscellaneous.

Size cannot exceed six inches by six inches and the ornament cannot weigh more than three ounces. Each ornament will be judged in its individual class and then a best of show will be chosen from the winners.

Wreaths may be made from four mediums. They are grapevine, straw, moss, or other. Size is not specified, but they should be able to be hung.

The two winning entries will then become the property of the Farm Show Scholarship Foundation and will be sold at the "Pennsylvania Bid-Calling Contest" on Wednesday evening January 9.

Entries will be accepted on the second floor of the Farm Show on Thursday, Jan. 3 between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

It is also possible to mail your entry. All entries must conform to the general rules.

Attend the Pennsylvania Farm Show held from Jan. 5-10 at 2301 N. Cameron St., Harrisburg.

Pork Barbecue

1 pound cooked pork
2 tablespoons sugar
½ cup ketchup
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 tablespoon vinegar
¼ cup pork broth
2 tablespoons worcestershire sauce
3 tablespoons pickle relish
Salt and pepper to taste

Cook pork until tender. Cut into small pieces. Mix together remaining ingredients with the pork. Simmer 30 minutes. If mixture seems dry or becomes dry before serving, add some of the pork broth. The pork can be cooked on the stovetop or roasted in the oven with a little water added to make a broth.

The meat can be shredded or pulled. She uses a food processor and just pulsates it until desired shredding. The meat must be cold to do this. A Boston butt roast is a good roast to use.

Two pounds raw pork gives approximately one pound cooked pork.

Ricotta, cottage cheese not the same

Someone told me that ricotta cheese is really just "Italian cottage cheese." Is that true?

Not quite. It is true that ricotta was first made in Italy and is classified as an Italian cheese. Also, recipes will often recommend substituting cottage cheese for ricotta, if necessary. Both are "fresh," or unripened, cheeses. They're both cooked at low temperatures to help them retain more whey, producing a soft cheese. And, they're both usually sold in the same type of round plastic containers. However, these are two distinct types of cheeses which are produced in different ways.

For one thing, ricotta cheese is traditionally made from whey — the watery stuff from milk that's left over when making other kinds of cheese — or from a combination of whey and whole or skim milk. In fact, "ricotta" means "recooked," referring to the notion that it's made by heating the whey that came from another cooked cheese. During production, the sweet whey is heated to a temperature of 200 degrees Fahrenheit. Citric acid may be used to help separate the protein from the water in the whey.

Usually, ricotta cheese-makers will use the whey left over from making mozzarella or provolone, but whey from romano cheese-making is used for a special type of ricotta, "ricotta romana." The whey usually comes from cow's milk, but some types of ricotta are made with ewe's milk whey.

Ricotta is a soft cheese that has a fine, moist, grainy texture. Cottage cheese, on the other hand, can easily be described as "lumpy." Whether the curds are small or large, they're much bigger than the grainy ricotta cheese. The milk for commercial cottage cheese is set with starter culture and rennet, like other cheeses. However, unlike other cheeses, cottage cheese can be made by either a short or long-setting method. In the short-setting method, more lactic starter is added and milk is set at a higher temperature to accelerate the coagulation. After the curds form and the cheese gets to the right texture, the whey is drained or rinsed off.

Cream is added to the curds for "creamed cottage cheese." For lowfat cottage cheese, 1 percent or 2 percent milk replaces the cream.

A half-cup of creamed cottage cheese contains about 115 calories, while 1 percent cottage cheese has about 80 calories. A half cup of ricotta cheese made with whole milk contains about 215 calories, but you can get ricotta made partly with skim milk for only 170 calories in a half-cup.

Representing Delaware, Arno Kissell of Newark, a member of the Bear 4-H Club, attended the 51st annual National 4-H Engineering, Science and Leadership Event in West Lafayette, Ind.

The annual 4-H event drew in 54 contestants from 12 states. Areas of competition included lawn tractor, aerospace, automotive, bicycle, computer, electric, small engines, tractor driving, and welding. All of the contestants had won county and state competitions to qualify for the national event.

Contestants and accompanying adults participants on educational field trips at Purdue University (West Lafayette), Frankford, and Indianapolis, Ind. They attended a workshop in the Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering at Purdue and guided tours of Frito-Lay, (Frankfort, Ind.), Indianapolis 500 Motor Speedway, (Speedway, Ind.), Round Grove Machine Corp., (near Lafayette), and Caterpillar Engine Plant (Lafayette).

The event was conducted by Extension Agricultural Engineers and 4-H professionals from participating states. John Deere and Company sponsored the Lawn Tractor and Small Engines contests. Additional funds were provided by local dealers.

Science- Based Information Provided On Engineered Foods

ITHACA, N.Y. — Consumers who want to know more about the genetically engineered foods they may be eating should consult a brochure produced by Cornell University. "Genetically Engineered Foods 2001: A Consumer Guide to What's in Store," is available at Wegmans' stores and Cornell Cooperative Extension offices throughout New York.

"The development of this brochure is part of Cornell University's commitment to educate the public and facilitate informed public discussion of the issues surrounding genetically engineered organisms," said Susan Henry, Ronald P. Lynch Dean of the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences at Cornell. "This brochure provides reliable, science-based information and puts it directly into the hands of consumers to help them make their own decisions about genetically engineered organisms."

At less than 1,000 words, the four-page brochure addresses consumer concerns with an approach that Wegmans' corporate nutritionist, Jane Andrews, deems as reliable information presented in a "balanced manner."

"This brochure fills a real need in consumer education," said Andrews. "For those consumers who want to know more about this subject, this brochure gives them the needed information in a concise manner and points them to additional sources of reliable information."

The brochure answers four questions in brief: What is genetic engineering? Why are these products produced? What genetically engineered foods/ ingredients are in food markets? Are genetically engineered foods safe to eat? Products that might contain ingredients made from genetically engineered plants are addressed crop by crop: soybean, corn, canola, cotton, potato, papaya, squash and zucchini. Dairy, meat products, and pharmaceuticals and their relationship to biotechnology are also discussed.

The brochure is a companion piece to two newly revamped Cornell Websites. www.geopie.cornell.edu/ identifies a variety of issues about agricultural biotechnology. www.nysaes.cornell.edu/comm/gmo/ provides links to the brochure and other Cornell biotech publications as well as streaming video by 29 presenters from the Cornell Conference on Agricultural Biotechnology Conference held last November.

4-H Family Likes Hands-On Projects

DAVE LEFEVER

YORK SPRINGS (Adams Co.) — The Gilbert kids enjoy putting things together.

Vince, 16, and Joel, 14, have been building rockets ever since they joined 4-H as elementary school students.

Anna, 9, is in the 4-H sewing club and recently finished her first skirt.

Vince and Joel plan to enter their rockets at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in January. Anna is also considering taking the skirt she made.

Vince has had a winning streak with his rockets ever since he began showing them at the South Mountain Fair eight years ago.

The rocket shown on the picture is a guided missile that won first place at both the South Mountain Fair and the Farm Show two years ago.

Vince said that the rockets are equipped with motors that blast them high into the sky.

It's important to have plenty of open space around the area the rockets are launched, he said.

Each rocket is equipped with a parachute. If the parachute is working properly, it will open as the rocket descends to provide a soft landing.

Either way, the used-up rocket motor must be replaced after each flight before the rocket can fly again.

Success in rocket competitions depends on how well the rocket was put together and painted, and on attention to details such as sanding the fins for smoothness, Vince said.

Besides his 4-H rocket projects, younger brother Joel also shows market lambs at the South Mountain Fair. He has won the award for showmanship several times, including his first time showing as a 3rd grader and this year as an 8th grader.

The brothers have also been involved in various other building projects.

One of them was a parade float based on the flying escape vehicle featured in the animated movie Chicken Run.

Vince said he worked with his father to build the float, a major project.

"It gets stressful when you're getting close to the parade (time) and don't have it done yet," he said.

Their hard work paid off, with the float winning first place in the New Oxford parade and second place at Dillsburg.

Vince, Joel, and Anna are the children of James and Elaine Gilbert, York Springs. They attend school in the Bermudian Springs District.

Their parents have played a big part in encouraging their interests.

Elaine is a substitute teacher and volunteer in many organizations, including 4-H. She is a leader in Anna's 4-H sewing club.

James was the first to fuel his sons' interest in rocketry and in building things.

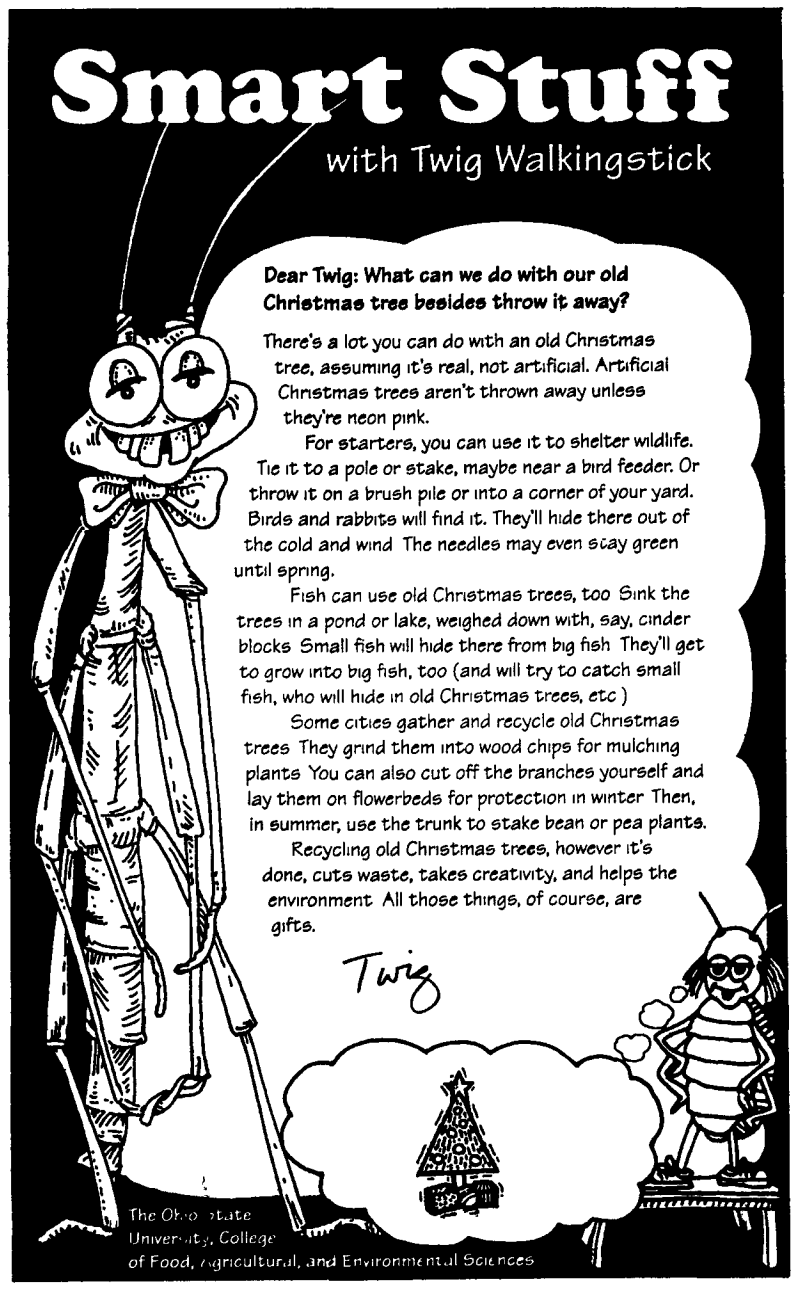
Smart Stuff

with Twig Walkingstick



Dear Twig: What can we do with our old Christmas tree besides throw it away?

There's a lot you can do with an old Christmas tree, assuming it's real, not artificial. Artificial Christmas trees aren't thrown away unless they're neon pink.

For starters, you can use it to shelter wildlife. Tie it to a pole or stake, maybe near a bird feeder. Or throw it on a brush pile or into a corner of your yard. Birds and rabbits will find it. They'll hide there out of the cold and wind. The needles may even stay green until spring.

Fish can use old Christmas trees, too. Sink the trees in a pond or lake, weighed down with, say, cinder blocks. Small fish will hide there from big fish. They'll get to grow into big fish, too (and will try to catch small fish, who will hide in old Christmas trees, etc.)

Some cities gather and recycle old Christmas trees. They grind them into wood chips for mulching plants. You can also cut off the branches yourself and lay them on flowerbeds for protection in winter. Then, in summer, use the trunk to stake bean or pea plants.

Recycling old Christmas trees, however it's done, cuts waste, takes creativity, and helps the environment. All those things, of course, are gifts.

REAL

Licorice Supplement Not Like Candy

I've heard that licorice is good for your health. Can I just chew on a few sticks of it to get the benefits?

Actually, you're probably thinking of the candy called licorice that doesn't have any real licorice in it at all — it's usually flavored with anise. But you can find licorice in health-food stores under a number of different names, including alcacuz, liquirizia, phytoestrogen, subholz, and sweet root.

People sometimes use "real" licorice as a dietary supplement to reduce the effect of ulcers or other kinds of intestinal distress. In fact, licorice root contains a compound that forms a kind of mucous that appears to coat the lining of the stomach and the esophagus.

People also sometimes use licorice products to treat bronchitis, and it may be effective for upper respiratory tract mucous membrane inflammation.

Although licorice is generally recognized as safe when used in small amounts in foods, less is known about it when used even in small amounts for medicinal purposes. That's one reason authorities usually recommend limiting its use to less than four to six weeks.

Even though licorice is a natural compound, it can still cause side effects. When used in large doses or for long periods, it might cause severe congestive heart failure, debilitating weakness, quadriplegia, increased blood pressure, or sexual dysfunction in men.

It also can interact with medications. For example, combined with the heart drug digoxin, licorice can cause potassium levels to drop dangerously low, resulting in problems with heart rhythm.

People with diabetes, hypertension, congestive heart disease, hypertonia, liver disease, renal insufficiency, hypokalemia, or sexual dysfunction should avoid using licorice. Women who are pregnant or breast-feeding should also stay away from it. And anyone on prescriptive medicine should talk with their doctor before deciding to self-medicate with any over-the-counter remedy.

Mom Was Right: Wash Your Hands

COLUMBUS, Ohio — It's estimated that more than one in four Americans become ill and 5,000 die every year from food-borne illness. But new research suggests that something as simple as washing your hands properly could prevent millions of illnesses every year.

'The number one thing we should be emphasizing in food-safety education efforts is handwashing," said Lydia Medeiros, food safety specialist for Ohio State University Extension and associate professor of human nutrition in the College of Human Ecology. "It might seem obvious, but it's also increasingly recognized that more than nine million people in America get sick from Norwalk virus every year. And, Norwalk and Norwalk-like viruses are primarily spread by not washing your hands properly before handling food."

The study was funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Research Initiative and Food Safety and Quality Initiative. For the project, Medeiros teamed up with Pat Kendall of Colorado State University and Virginia Hillers of Washington State University. Medeiros led the team in surveying the leading food-safety experts from across the nation in pinpointing the key pathogens that cause food-borne illness and identifying behaviors consumers can use to reduce their risk from those specific pathogens. Findings from this part of the project were published in the November 2001 issue of the Journal of the American Dietetic Association.

Medeiros conducted the surveys over the Internet, using a web-based program and e-mail to collect information from 41 epidemiologists, microbiologists, food safety educators and policymakers — the top professionals in the food-safety field.

'These are the real movers and shakers in food safety," Medeiros said. "They are authors of textbooks and the leading researchers from the USDA, the Food and Drug Administration, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, from all over the country." In four rounds of surveys, the experts were asked to make judgments on food-handling behaviors and their relevance to specific disease-causing organisms. During each round, the participants had four weeks to review the survey questions, think about them, review references and respond. Then, a panel of six experts — four educators and two policy-makers — met in person to review all the results and finalize a list of food-safe behaviors.

Those behaviors, in order, are the following:

— Practice personal hygiene. Most people wash their hands before handling food, Medeiros said, but many wash incorrectly or fail to wash their hands after handling raw meat or other high-risk foods and before handling fruits or vegetables that won't be cooked before eating.

People should use soap and warm running water while washing their hands. "Washing for at least 20 seconds is often recommended, but that's not a 'magic number,'" Medeiros said. "That's more of a guideline to make sure you wash thoroughly. You need to get in-between the fingers and up to your wrists. And use warm running water to allow everything to wash away."

This step will help fight Norwalk and Norwalk-like viruses, the most common food-borne disease pathogen affecting an estimated 9.2 million people a year. The viruses usually cause mild illness, but appear to be infective at very low doses. Illness is marked by sudden vomiting and diarrhea. Washing hands properly will also help prevent the spread of other food-borne illnesses, including Shigella and Hepatitis A.

— Cook foods adequately. Experts recommend using a thermometer to make sure meat and poultry are cooked to safe temperatures. Medeiros said food safety educators need to focus efforts on using thermometers correctly and how to determine doneness for foods such as fish or thin burgers that thermometers can't be used on.

This step will help combat Campylobacter jejuni, the second-highest food-borne disease pathogen affecting an estimated 2 million people each year, as well as Salmonella, Toxoplasma gondii, Yersinia enterocolitica, and E. coli O157:H7.

— Avoid cross contamination. This can be done by washing knives, cutting boards and surfaces with hot water and soap before, during and after food preparation, especially after coming into contact with raw poultry, meat and seafood, Medeiros said. Cooked and any ready-to-eat foods should be kept separated from raw meats and their juices.

This step will help combat the same organisms as those under "cook foods adequately," Medeiros said.

— Keep foods at safe temperatures. This guideline, also known as "Keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold," is often emphasized in food safety education efforts, Medeiros said. The guidelines include keeping cold foods below 40 degrees, hot foods above 140 degrees, and making sure perishable foods don't stay at room temperature for more than two hours.

People seem to have gotten the message, Medeiros said, because diseases associated with not keeping foods at safe temperatures are on the downswing. Also, these diseases — Clostridium perfringens, Staphylococcus aureus and Bacillus cereus — are usually less severe than other food-borne diseases, she said.

'When we have limited time, we might be able to emphasize this less today than we have in the past," Medeiros said.

— Avoid foods from unsafe sources. This step is especially important for people most at-risk from food-borne diseases, Medeiros said — young children, the elderly, the immuno-compromised, and pregnant women. It includes making sure milk and fruit juices have been pasteurized and avoiding raw sprouts, soft cheeses, and hot dogs and lunch meats that have not been reheated to at least 165 degrees F.

This step will help combat Listeria monocytogenes and Clostridium botulinum. Both can result in serious illness but they are much more rare.

Listeria affects an estimated 2,500 Americans a year, while fewer than 60 Americans get botulism.

The researchers are in the midst of redesigning food safety education materials to correspond to their findings (see http://foodsafety.wsu.edu/) and writing up results from other aspects of their research. They have also received two more USDA grants to continue their work. One project will focus on designing materials for special at-risk populations — pregnant women, people diagnosed with HIV and AIDS, and chemotherapy and organ transplant patients. The other project involves a graduate-level distance-learning course taught at Ohio State, Colorado State and Washington State in fall 2003 as well as continuing education efforts for health workers and dietitians, focusing on food safety education.

Take Steps Now To Prevent Osteoporosis

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Osteoporosis is often thought of as an older person's disease, but it is important to take steps now to prevent osteoporosis, which results in loss of bone tissue, brittle bones, and disfiguring disease later on. The best treatment for osteoporosis is preventing it in the first place.

Bones are not lifeless structures, but living tissue.

Think of bones as a bank account, where you deposit and withdrawn bone tissue. The best way to deposit calcium in your bones is to add calcium to your diet during every year of your life.

Have a dairy product at every meal. Grate cheese over a salad or add a slice of cheese to your sandwich. Both low-fat and regular dairy products add high quality calcium to your diet. Other high-calcium foods are broccoli, tofu, canned salmon with bones, and calcium-fortified orange juice.

Weight-bearing exercise, which causes muscles to work against gravity, can help build bone density. Walking is an excellent weight-bearing exercise that strengthens legs, hips, and lower back. Dancing, gardening, swimming, bicycling are also beneficial.

During normal childhood and adolescence, much more bone is deposited than withdrawn so that the skeleton grows both in size and density. The amount of tissue or bone mass in the skeleton reaches it maximum by the mid-thirties. After this, the amount of bone in the skeleton begins to decline slowly.

Menopause greatly accelerates the loss of bone in most women, but men too develop osteoporosis. By age 65 or 70, women and men lose bone mass at the same rate, and calcium absorption decreases for both sexes. Almost half of all people over the age of 75 are affected by osteoporosis.

Osteoporosis makes bones more susceptible to fracture, most often of the wrist, spine, and hip. Spinal fractures cause a stooped posture, loss of height, and chronic back pain. Hip fracture, the most serious consequent of osteoporosis, threaten's one's independence and often leads to death.

Early diagnosis is essential because osteoporosis can develop silently for decades until a fracture occurs. Safe, accurate, and noninvasive tests are available for measuring bone mass. Ask your doctor for bone density testing.

Nancy Wiker, family and consumer science extension agent, is tested for osteoporosis. Free testing was offered recently to about 600 attendees of the Lebanon County Holiday Program. This machine measures bone density of the heel of the foot.

Osteoporosis Facts

Osteoporosis is a disease that causes bones to gradually become more brittle and more likely to break.

Not until a bone breaks. Until then, osteoporosis develops without warning. You may not even know when certain fractures occur, especially in your spine. These "crush fractures" can cause the back to become humped. What's more, they can often cause nagging pain, and they can make everyday activities, such as carrying and lifting or doing housework, difficult.

How do I know if I have osteoporosis?

In the past, osteoporosis wasn't found until after a patient suffered a broken bone; however, it is better to make the diagnosis before a bone breaks. This is done by studying a person's chance of getting this disease (risk factors): age, menopausal status, family history, and bone mineral density. The lower the density, the greater the risk of fracture.

Bone mineral density is measured indirectly with one of several tools. Most use low levels of radiation, but ultrasonic waves are also being studied in this regard. All such tests are safe and painless.

- Eating a diet rich in calcium and vitamin D is important for bone health.
- Dietary supplements may be needed.
- Walking and other regular exercises that cause the bones to carry weight are also helpful.
- Prescription drugs can help to prevent osteoporosis. These include estrogen replacement therapy, alendronate, and raloxifene.

No. Exercise is important regardless of age. However, a person who is not used to exercise should not begin an exercise program without first talking to his or her health care provider.

Test Your Calcium I.Q.

You've heard about calcium. You know that it's good for building strong bones, but did you know that calcium also helps your muscles contract and relax, helps your blood clot, and helps your nerves send messages?

Because this nutrient is so vital for good health, experts say we need plenty of calcium in our diets. Are you getting your fair share? Many of us aren't. On average, most adults consume much less than the 1,000 mg recommended by the National Institutes of Health Expert Panel. To see how calcium savvy you are, try this quiz. Then, check the correct answers to see if you need to bone-up.

A. Drinking vitamin D-fortified milk.

B. Exposure to sunlight.

C. Both A and B.

Calcium Quiz Answers (Give yourself one point for every correct answer)

1. True. You never outgrow your need for calcium. Adults, both men and women, need 1,000 mg every day. Why? Even after you've stopped growing tall, your bones continue to grow strong and dense up until about age 30. As you continue to age, calcium helps maintain your bone density.

2. True. Meeting your calcium needs may reduce your risk of osteoporosis by helping you reach your genetically determined peak bone mass, usually at around age 30, and by slowing age-related bone loss in later years. Research shows that getting plenty of calcium can help keep your blood pressure in check and may also reduce your risk of colon cancer.

3. False. Milk and milk products are the best sources of calcium — even when you're on the go. Calcium supplements provide calcium, but few, if any, other nutrients. There are plenty of "grab and go" choices in the Milk Group. If you're pressed for time, grab a glass of milk or a container of yogurt, take string cheese to eat while you're on the go, or order frozen yogurt, a milk shake, or ice cream when you're at the drive-thru.

4. False. Unless you have a history of kidney stones, a high calcium intake — up to 2,000 mg per day — does not cause kidney stones. On the contrary, some research shows that consuming the recommended amount of calcium may actually reduce your risk of kidney stones.

5. False. You don't have to give up milk and milk products if you have trouble digesting lactose. Most people who have trouble digesting lactose can consume at least 1 cup of milk with food. Aged cheeses like cheddar and yogurt with "live active cultures" are also more easily digested.

6. B. Most adults need 1,000 mg of calcium a day — or the amount found in 3 servings from the Milk Group. One cup of milk, flavored or unflavored, contains about 300 mg of calcium, as does a cup of yogurt or 1.5 ounces of cheese. Milk and milk products provide 75 percent of the available calcium in the food supply. Without them, it's unlikely you'll get enough of this bone-building mineral from your diet.

7. D & F. Skim milk has the most calcium per 8-ounce serving, but all have approximately 300 mg per serving. These milks differ in their calorie and fat contents. If you're concerned about fat and calories, there are a variety of milk products to choose from:

- Two percent reduced-fat milk (120 calories, 5g fat).
- One percent low-fat milk (100 calories, 2.5g fat)
- Skim milk (80 calories, 0g fat).

8. E. Milk and milk products are the richest sources of well-absorbed calcium — and they're convenient, too. Other foods, including some green, leafy vegetables, canned fish with edible bones, bread, and cereals also contain calcium, but in smaller amounts compared to foods from the Milk Group. Some foods like spinach contain substances that can decrease calcium absorption. For this reason, it's important to choose a variety of calcium-containing foods.

9. A. If your diet's short of calcium, your body will "rob" what it needs from your bones. Over time, calcium losses from bone can increase your risk of the bone-crippling disease osteoporosis.

10. C. Fortified milk and sunlight are good sources of vitamin D. When you are in the sun, your body makes enough vitamin D. But if you stay indoors or wear a topical sunscreen with an SPF of 8 or greater, you'll need to rely on food for vitamin D. Vitamin D-fortified milk is your best bet since it's one of the richest sources of vitamin D in the food supply.

Do You Need To Bone-Up On Calcium?

If You Scored

5-7 Good...you're on the right tract to good health, but you still need to bone-up on calcium. Grab a stick of string cheese as you write down your calcium needs on a note for the fridge.

2-4 Fair...you have some work to do to become a calcium whiz. Remember, it's never too late to strengthen those bones and your overall health. Enjoy some fruit-filled yogurt as you look over the calcium content on the food labels in your fridge.

Thank God

In this land that is changing and drifting
When the faith of His people are torn
There's a nation of hope and of freedom
Where the sons of courage are born
'Tis the land of the star-spangled banner
'Tis the land that is fairer than day
Thank God for the land born of freedom
Thank God for the U.S.A.

Chorus:
Thank God for the U.S.A.
Thank God for the brave and the true
Thank God for the true American way
For the stars and the red, white, and blue
Thank God for the land we love,
Our friends, our liberty
Thank God for the right to be an American
Thank God for the U.S.A.
Let us trust in the faith of our Fathers
And the emblem of red, white, and blue
May it wave over our nation forever
For the free, the brave, and the true.
Let us give thanks to God now and ever
For our country and the land of the free
Thank God for the land born of freedom
Thank God for the U.S.A.
To the Almighty father in heaven
To the one that is higher than all
May He lead, may He guide us and keep us
By His grace, we never shall fall
For the stars and stripes of Old Glory
Let us humbly and earnestly pray
Thank God for the right to be an American

Online Grafting Course Starts Soon

ITHACA, N.Y. — If you'd like to learn grafting but never have time to attend a scheduled course or don't live near a university, you can learn this advanced gardening technique on your own time, from any place you like. With access to a properly equipped computer and the Internet, you can take The How, When, and Why of Grafting for Gardeners, a noncredit distance-learning course that includes web-based lectures and quizzes, video demonstrations, hands-on grafting with live plants, and interactive discussions. It is taught by faculty and staff at Cornell University's Department of Horticulture and will be of particular interest to serious gardeners and horticulturists.

The 10-week course requires about four to eight hours of work per week and will be offered Feb. 18, 2002, through April 26. Upon registration, students will receive a password to access the course Website, from which they can read weekly lectures, view still images and video clips of grafting procedures, engage in online discussions with fellow students and the instructors, and take multiple-choice quizzes. With live hibiscus plants and a grafting knife supplied by Cornell, students will practice hands-on grafting in the comfort of their own homes. Plants will be shipped about three weeks before class begins so they have a chance to acclimate.

Distance learning is no longer a lonely, isolating experience. The How, When, and Why of Grafting for Gardeners encourages interaction among students and between the instructors and students. Through a web-based discussion board, students can pose a question, share an experience, or even post images. The instructors take an active, daily part in the discussions and respond via the discussion board or e-mail.

Video clips, supplied on a CD to save download time and increase resolution, are integrated into the Website and show step-by-step procedures for three different techniques that students will practice: chip budding, T-budding, and top-wedging grafting. Gardeners can apply these skills to propagate plants that don't root easily; confer desirable characteristics of one variety onto another; create unusual growth forms; such as tree peonies and bonsai; and put multiple varieties on a single plant, such as an apple tree containing several varieties. To view a sample lecture, "Reasons for Grafting and Budding," and to see a listing of all lectures, visit http://instruct1.cit.cornell.edu/courses/hort494/mg/.

The registration fee is $215 if postmarked by Jan. 14, 2002, and $240 if postmarked after Jan. 14; all registrations are due by Feb. 4. Included in the fee are a password to access the Website, several varieties of two- to three-foot-tall hibiscus plants, a grafting knife, a CD of videos of grafting techniques, shipping costs to send plants and supplies, and a certificate of completion issued by Cornell's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences. Students are responsible for pots and soil for the hibiscus plants, which are shipped bare-root with planting and care instructions.

Course prerequisites include a high school or college biology course; previous gardening experience; convenient access to a computer, the Internet, and e-mail; and commitment and motivation to undertake serious learning. Hardware and software requirements include a Pentium or Macintosh computer with a CD-ROM drive; Internet access (56.6K modem or high-speed connection); a Java-capable browser (Netscape or Microsoft Explorer, version 4.0 or higher); and the QuickTime plug-in, version 4.0 or higher. (Instructions for downloading this free plug-in will be provided for those who do not have it.)

To register for the course, or for more information, contact NRAES, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701; phone (607) 255-7654.

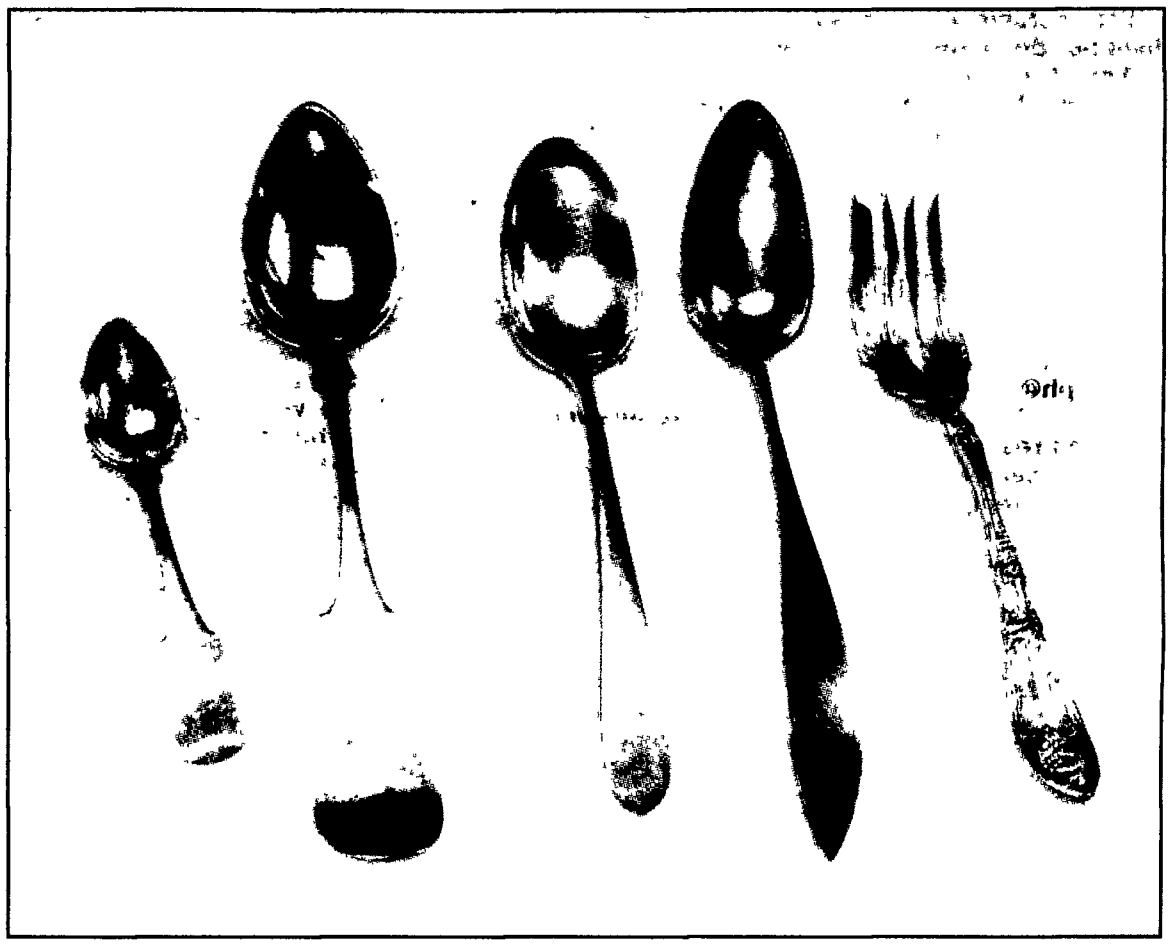
Antiques Center

Kenneth Fegan, antique and fine arts appraiser, explains how to determine age and value of undated objects. He is holding a 1950s' decoy that he purchased for $12 in the 1960s and for which he has been offered $3,500 recently.



The value of silver spoons is determined by style and the amount of silver in the spoon. The small spoon and the large one with the rounded top are coin silver fashioned by Reading silversmith Mannerback about 1825. They sell between $125-$150. The spoon with the most pointed top, dated 1805, is valued at $100. The other spoon and the fork are sterling silver and retail about $35.

What's Hot? What's Not?

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Many collectors want to purchase only antiques that increase in value. Some people count on their investments as retirement funds. Others collect items because they love them.

Whatever the reason for collecting, nobody wants to be taken advantage of, but if you are an avid collector, you've probably experienced at least one disappointing buy.

"Knowledge is money," Kenneth Fegan, Annville, said of the need for collectors to research the market. He recommends studying books and catalogs and frequenting shows and sales.

Fegan, antique and fine arts appraiser, recently conducted a workshop at Hershey Museum, Hershey, on "What's Hot? What's Not?"

Some highly collectible items decades ago have lost value, although they are older.

A case in point is copper luster. Fegan said copper luster was highly valued in the 1950-1960s market, but now only bring a pittance of what it did.

"Supply and demand determine the market," Fegan said.

Some pieces thought to be rare bring hefty prices at auctions. When people hear of the prices, they may bring their own pieces to market. This sometimes shows that the item isn't rare, and prices will dwindle. Books listing the value of items sometimes also "shakes" pieces out of hiding," Fegan said.

"Age is the least important criteria," Fegan said of determining price. For example, a Chinese vase made between 1690-1710 only sells for about $150 in the Lebanon, Lancaster, and Berks areas, because this area doesn't have much demand for Chinese pieces. The same vase would bring about $350 in other parts of the U.S. Considering the age, that price is still low.

Fegan showed a 1953 decoy that he purchased for $12 in 1960, for which someone recently offered him $3,500.

Fegan said that Miles Hancock, Eastern Shore, had carved great quantities of decoys that sold for $12 originally. Hancock's decoys and some made by other well-known carvers can bring as much as $50,000.

Condition is a determining criteria for prices. Decoys with original paint are much more valuable than those that are damaged or have been repainted.

"Never touch a painted surface with paint thinner or any polish containing silicone," Fegan warned of decreasing the value of painted pieces. If you want to clean a piece up a bit, he recommends using butcher's paste wax.

From Fegan's perspective, the hottest items on the market are painted wood furniture and objects. "It must be the original surface, and it helps if you know where the piece came from."

Beware of skilled craftsman who try to duplicate the look of original painted surfaces. Fegan said that buyers who plan to invest a lot of money in a piece should pay an appraiser or use a black light or X-ray to determine the age of pieces.

One can also develop and keen eye. "A gray cast on painted furniture probably means it was painted over," Fegan said.

"Buy from reputable dealers and ask for an authenticity bill of sale," Fegan said.

Fegan considers an antique anything that is 100 years or older. Dealers are buying items from the 1930s-1980s on the speculative market. Dealers buy items they expect to become collectible. This enables them to buy at a low price and sell at a profit if the are desired in upcoming years.

School art is another valued item among collectors. Much of this was done by teachers in the early 1900s and given as award merits to students. In Lebanon County, Fegan said, school art is still a bargain.

Fegan cautioned against using harsh cleaners on dishes. "If you put it something that is too harsh, it can remove the plate's decoration," he said. He recommends cleaning china that is glazed on top with hydrogen peroxide. If hand-painted china is not glazed on top, do not use hydrogen peroxide or harsh cleaners.

The Sept. 11 terrorists' attacks "have shaken the antique market," Fegan said. "The middle of the road is dead. Money at the top is no object. But the middle-of-the road dealer who buys on Saturday to sell on Sunday needs cash flow.

Fegan recommends writing down any information you have about antiques that you own. Written information helps in appraisals and adds value to family heirlooms.

The 1690-1710 Chinese vase sells for about $150 in the Lancaster-Lebanon area and $350 elsewhere. The splatterware cup plate sells for about $300.

Antiques Questions And Answers

Any idea of the value or age of this wicker lounge rocker ? My mother says it is very old.

C.Z. - Hollandale, FL

From your photo your unusual "rocker" lounge would date 1920s, 30s.Though it needs a touch up of paint it could sell at auction for $450 or more.

I would appreciate any price information you could give me on an etching-aquatint, "Di Pfluger (plowing), 1906 by Kathe Kollwitz. It is 12 ⅛" x 17 ⅞".

A.M. - Miami Springs, FL

Your etching/aquatint was the first of a series about the reality of peasant life done by Kollwitz (German. 1867-1945). According the Mayer auction prices, 1999, similar works have sold at auction for as much as $3,000.

Can you evaluate my five desert plates, with floral borders, of bone china? On the bottom they are marked with and "M" in a wreath. Below that is the word "Nippon".

J.L. - Homestead, FL

Your plates were made between 1891, when the McKinley Tariff Ace forced items of foreign make be labeled with country of origin. The word for Japan is "Nippon." However, in 1921 the United States mandated all Japanese items to be marked "Japan." Your plates could sell for $40 each in a shop.

Would this covered vegetable dish be saleable? On the bottom it is marked; Haviland, France, The Cherbourg, Haviland Bc Co., Limoges. It is porcelain with a delicate floral motif and gilt trim.

N.M.C. - North Miami, FL

Hundreds of patterns were made, many similar. Your vegetable dish could sell in a shop for $250.

I bought this gilt porcelain lamp with a center medallion of an 18th century romantic couple 20 years ago for $2.00. Could it be Limoges? On the back there is a round medallion marked inside, "Le Mieux china. 24 K gold. border crafted." Is it worth having it appraised?

J.R.B. - Cincinnati, OH

Your lamp is not Limoges. It is one of many gilded porcelain items made in the 1940s, 50s. Unfortunately "all that glitters isn't gold." It has a shop value of around $75.

Are travel posters worth anything? I found an old one in my late aunt's attic in good condition. It is of the Palace Hotel Wengen, 1928 that shows a hotel at the bottom of the Alps.

C.T. - Cincinnati, OH

Age, rarity, condition, subject and artist determine the value. Yours is listed in the Warman's Antiques and Collectibles Price Guide at $800.

We have a cradle made generations ago and handed down in our family. It is a figured maple and the family dates it as around 1870. Aside from sentimental value what could it be worth?

G.S.F. - Cincinnati, OH

Corn Talk, Lancaster Farming, Saturday, October 13, 2001

For Manheim Grower, Difference Is In The Details

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co) — The key is finding the limiting factor

When Dwight Rohrer speaks of his approach to successful crop management, the discussion may sound like a bit of a science lesson

Which is to be expected, really, from a lifetime farmer and agronomy major

Rohrer's management techniques have helped him win the top corn yield contest in the Pennsylvania shelled corn class in 2000 Additionally he had the highest soybean yields in Pennsylvania in 1996 He has participated in local yield contests since he began farming in 1997

Most recently, he began entering the statewide contest for the past four years. Prior to that he had entered the local Manheim Young Farmer's yield contest Rohrer is also planning on entering the upcoming national contest

"I'm a fairly competitive person," he said "That's probably why I participate in the field contests I learn a lot, too " Exchanging information about what worked this season or what other producers are experimenting with provides essential help, said Rohrer

"I don't enter just to win," he said. "My goal is to be able to evaluate myself against other producers Contests allow farmers to compare themselves to growers in their area

"Contests show me where I'm at," he said. "In farm management your goal should be to maintain production in the top 10 percent of the industry, so competition allows me to evaluate that I also see what I can learn from what other producers are doing," he said

Crop Management

With 65 acres on his farm, Rohrer finds it necessary to maximize production "We just try to do the best with what we have," he said

Since there is no underground or nearby water source available for irrigation, water is his "most limiting factor "

"The general principle in any crop is that the producer needs to find what the limiting factor is and manage that the best they can," he said "In this area, rainfall is the limiting factor, and I work to make sure that moisture is the only limiting factor of my yield, because that's the only part I can't control " Factors such as seed, fertilizer, and most pests can be managed, explained Rohrer

"I try to buy good seed, make sure the corn doesn't run out of nutrients, and make sure there is no insect pressure or soil compaction issue to deal with to limit production "

As for advice for other crop growers, "don't worry about rain," he said "Do the best you can with what you have, and don't worry about the rest "

One technique he uses to maximize moisture is to intentionally deep-till in the fall to create vertical channels for water to filter

Between The Rows

Dr. Greg Roth

Improving Corn Silage Harvest Timing

This is my first Between the Rows since I left last September for a six-month visit to the Miner Institute in northern New York to study corn silage and dairy cows After going through another silage harvest here with my Miner experience under my belt, I thought a few comments on silage harvesting might be in order

My hosts at Miner, Ev Thomas and Dr Charlie Sniffen, continually reinforced to me the idea that to make milk, cows need good and consistent forage quality from both hay crops and corn silage The Miner staff conducted a survey of active farms a few years back in their area and found that there is a wide range of corn silage quality being fed, dispelling the idea that "silage is silage "

There are many factors that influence silage quality, but perhaps the biggest one is the timing of harvest Harvesting too late is especially devastating Late-harvested silage (greater than 40 percent DM) generally has lower fiber digestibility, harder kernels, less sugar, and slightly lower yields than that harvested in the desired moisture range It also packs less well and is more subject to yeast and molds All of these factors could result in two pounds less production per cow, translating into a $10,000 loss annually on a 100-cow herd

Managing Your Well During Drought

In recent years, frequent droughts have caused severe water shortages in parts of Pennsylvania.

Droughts can be especially stressful for the one million rural homeowners who rely on private wells for their water supply. These individual wells tap groundwater aquifers that cannot easily be seen or monitored. The invisible nature of groundwater leads to an uneasy feeling among homeowners relying on wells that their water supply could dry up without warning during a drought.

This article explains this typical variation of water in wells and gives some hints on estimating groundwater levels near your well and managing your water during drought.

Normal Cycle Of Groundwater Levels

The water level in a groundwater well will fluctuate naturally during the year. Groundwater levels tend to be highest during March and April in response to winter snowmelt and spring rainfall.

The movement of rain and snowmelt into groundwater is known as "recharge." Groundwater levels usually begin to fall in May and continue to decline during the summer. Groundwater recharge is limited during late spring and summer because trees and other plants use the available water to grow.

Natural groundwater levels usually reach their lowest point in late September or October. In late fall, after trees and plants have stopped growing and before snow begins to fall, groundwater levels may rise in response to rainfall and recharge. Groundwater recharge persists through the fall until cold temperatures produce snowfall and frozen soil that limit the ability of water to infiltrate into the ground.

Groundwater levels during winter may be stable or fall slightly until spring snowmelt and rainstorms start the annual cycle again. Given this natural cycle of groundwater, most problems with wells tend to occur in late summer or early fall when groundwater levels naturally reach their lowest levels.

Natural Fluctuation Of Groundwater Levels

Fluctuation tends to be most pronounced in shallow wells. As a result, shallow wells are usually more susceptible to drought than deeper wells.

Shallow, hand-dug wells, for example, are often the first wells to dry up during drought. Although deeper wells may be slower to suffer from drought conditions, they may also take longer to recover after a drought has occurred.

Land Use Changes Affect Susceptibility Of Well To Drought?

Dramatic changes have occurred to the landscape in many rural areas of Pennsylvania. Increasing development and rural population growth will likely continue in the future. Existing rural residents often worry that these changes may create competition for groundwater that might increase the susceptibility of their well to drought. It is unlikely that small numbers of new homes will cause significant changes in groundwater levels.

However, more dramatic changes in land use that tap large amounts of groundwater or prevent recharge from occurring over a wide area could make existing wells more susceptible to drought. This is especially true in areas where mining is occurring or where large paved areas prevent rainfall and snowmelt from recharging groundwater.

Monitoring Groundwater Levels?

Direct determination of the groundwater level in your well is difficult and usually requires the use of a water level meter. These meters are comprised of an electrical probe attached to the end of a measuring tape. The probe is lowered into the well until a display or light indicates that it has reached water. The depth to water is then read directly from the measuring tape. These instruments generally cost $300 or more depending on the anticipated length of tape needed.

There are other, less direct, but more practical methods to determine the status of your well water supply. In recent years, the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) has developed a Web-based system to access water levels from a group of monitoring wells in Pennsylvania. The USGS measures 67 wells in nearly every county of the state. They have developed a web page that allows viewers to access water levels over the past two years from 40 of these wells. In addition to the actual water level, different shaded areas are provided to illustrate the normal conditions as well as drought watch, warning, and emergency water levels. This information, although not specific to your well, will allow you to observe the general trend in groundwater levels in your area. The Webpage for this system is http://pa.water.usgs.gov/durplots/well—duration.html

Once you access this page, choose the well nearest to your house and select the "30-day graph" to view the up-to-date groundwater conditions in your area. The graphs are color coded to easily show when a particular well is experiencing drought conditions and the severity of the conditions.

You can also view up-to-date groundwater levels and other information for all 67 monitoring wells, including the water levels over the past seven days, at the following USGS Website: http://water.usgs.gov/pa/nwis/current?typegw

You may also be able to learn more about your local groundwater conditions by contacting local well drillers and neighbors. Well drillers are continually drilling new wells and, therefore, may have knowledge of groundwater levels near your well. They may also have installed new submersible pumps in nearby wells that would allow them to document the existing groundwater level. Similar discussions with neighbors that have had new pumps installed or had new wells drilled may provide valuable information about the groundwater level.

How Can I Conserve Water?

Water conservation measures become critical during times of drought. Homeowners relying on private wells should begin to conserve water as soon as drought conditions occur. Water use within the home can be significantly reduced through changes in habits and by installing water-saving devices. In emergency situations, changes in water use habits can provide quick reductions in water use.

For more information on ways to save water around the home, consult the Penn State Cooperative Extension publication entitled "22 Ways To Save Water In An Emergency" and "A Guide to Designing A Community Water Conservation Program." These publications are available free-of-charge from your local cooperative extension office or can be ordered from the College of Agricultural Sciences, Publication Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713.

Additional information about permanent reductions in water use through installation of water-saving devices, such as low-flush toilets and front-loading washers, is available at the following U.S. Environmental Protection Webpage: http://www.epa.gov/seahome/watcon.html.

What Can I Do If My Well Runs Dry?

There are a number of reasons why a well may quit producing water. The most frequent cause is a malfunctioning or worn-out submersible pump. Other electrical problems, such as a malfunctioning electrical switch at the pressure tank, may also cause a loss of water.

Pressure tanks also need to be replaced from time to time. Water quality problems, like iron bacteria and sediment, may also clog the well and severely restrict water flow from the well.

A well driller or competent plumber should be consulted to determine the exact cause of the problem.

Market Manager: 'My Neighbors Are My Customers'

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEFFSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Directing traffic has multiple meanings at the Erb family's Brooklawn Farm roadside stand.

Now in the midst of planting season, owner Jim Erb is planting sweet corn field corn, Indian popcorn and ornamental corn in the warming earth.

In addition, we still farm 100 acres of field corn and soybeans, said Erb, who is joined by his wife Romaine, daughter Diana, a horticulture student at Penn State, and son Jeffrey.

We're serving the immediate community. We don't do a lot of advertising. We see our customers over and over again during the season, and see them season after season. We view what we're doing as being their gardeners. It feels like in a sense we're an extension of the community. My customers are my neighbors.

The essence of what we're doing here is our own home-grown produce. That's still the key, he said. Strawberries, varieties of corn, sugar snap and bull peas, peaches, plums, nectarines, pears and apples are some of the home grown produce that Brooklawn customers enjoy.

A Seasonal Business

In April, bedding plants and mulch products open the season, which closes with Christmas trees the end of the year. During the off season, the Erbs and employees service and maintain their equipment, take a vacation, housecleaning and attend conferences and trade shows.

I love to go to meetings and get ideas. I have more ideas than what I can get done, he said. One of these

Full Summer Sun Critical As Growers Prepare For Raspberry Season

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Raspberries are flowering on the vines as summer weather shows up early in Lancaster County orchards. Raspberries, either summer-bearing or ever-bearing, do well when planted on an open site with at least 6-8 hours of sunlight, according to Ohio State University Extension Fact Sheet HYG-1421-98, "Raspberries For the Backyard Fruit Planting." Page 12 includes recommended raspberries and cultural characteristics, including a chart for training systems and plant spacing, from the university. This scene shows early May growth of raspberries at Shenk's Berry Farm near Lititz, which also features pick your-own strawberries in season. Owners John and Linda Shenk maintain about two acres of three different varieties of raspberries. They have mostly black raspberries, pictured here, including Lauren Jewell. They also have some red raspberries, including Lauren Marry were planted about six years ago. The raspberries can be picked beginning in early July. Photo by Andy Andrews, editor

Tomato Processor Honors Growers At Luncheon

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — A man who has served the tomato processing industry countless thousands of dollars, noted James Kohl, vice president of Furman Foods, was honored with a service award in early February.

Cyril Smith, professor emeritus of plant nutrition, was honored for 42 years of service by Kohl of Furman Foods.

The award was presented in front of about 50 growers and agri-industry representatives at the annual Pennsylvania and Maryland Tomato Awards Luncheon during the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

Smith's band fertilizer placement was crucial in cost savings and improvement in nutrient use by the plant, now adopted widely by the industry.

The Master Grower Award for 2001 was presented to BJ Farms, Bridgetown, N.J., represented by Gregg and Frank Baitinger.

Kohl spoke about the recent acquisition by Furman of Tri-Valley Growers in California. Furman Foods now owns all brand Tri-Valley labels, Kohl said. Tri-Valley processed about 800,000-850,000 tons of tomatoes per year, compared to Furman's 65,000 tons, but Furman's has plans in place to ensure continue production at similar scales.

You have to move forward or be left behind, said Kohl. We expect to get better at (processing) and be bigger at it. This will enhance their total East Coast processing.

Three Generations Part Of A Growing Business In Landisville

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Urban sprawl, though a challenge to farmers, can also be an opportunity, as David and Lois Landis have discovered.

Warm summertime temperatures seem to stir local residents' tastes for fresh produce from the farm, as customers forego their daily stop at the grocery store to purchase food grown on the acreage behind the roadside stand at Landisview Produce.

Consequently, the combination of availability of customers and their eagerness to purchase the product has led to a full-time job for the Landis family.

Landis father, John S. Landis, 85, and mother, Anna, also still help at the stand.

Tomatoes, along with Silver King and Argent sweet corn are the hottest sellers for Landis. That's what

Geraniums, Impatiens Fill Plots At 'Flowering' Research Center

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — About 800 different flower varieties were on display in trials here last year at the Penn State Southeast Agricultural Research and Extension Center.

In this photo from mid-July, the two largest trials involved geraniums and impatiens at the entrance to the facility, according to John Yocum, research and extension center manager.

Yocum said the variety studies, on about an acre at the center, have been under way close to 10 years, when "we stopped growing tobacco at the station," he said. Alan Michael, Penn State horticulture, is coordinating the trials.

Last week the center was busy transplanting new varieties in the greenhouse. Work last year looked at full sun and partial shade impatiens varieties and a wide variety of other flowers.

New Rules Established For Transport Of Horses To Slaughter

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has published a final rule that establishes minimum standards to ensure the humane movement of equines to slaughtering facilities by way of commercial transportation.

The regulations address food, water and rest provided to the animals. Owners and shippers of horses are required to take certain actions in loading and transporting the animals, and they must certify that the commercial transportation meets certain requirements.

In addition, the regulations prohibit the commercial transportation to slaughtering facilities of horses considered to be unfit for travel, the use of electric prods and, within five years, the use of double deck trailers.

The number of double deck trailers has been reduced in the last few years, being replaced with single deck trailers.

A lesson well learned...

BUSINESS ❖ NEWS

New, heavy-duty Glencoe® Disc Rippers have models and adjustments to match varying field conditions and conservation tillage needs.

New Heavy-Duty Disc Rippers Introduced By Glencoe

ATLANTA, Ga. — Three new disc rippers from Glencoe use a combination of discs and shanks to cut and mix soil and residue down to six inches (150 millimeters), and subsoil to 18 inches (460 millimeters), all in just one pass.

The DR8500 Disc Ripper has two double-offset tandem disc gangs in front, followed by deep-tilling shanks that leave a coarse soil surface to better trap moisture and prevent erosion. The DR8700 Disc Ripper positions the shanks between the disc gangs where the rear discs can mulch and level the soil. The SS7600 Soil Saver is similar to the DR8700 except for additional shank offerings.

All three units feature 22- by ¼-inch (260- by 6-millimeter) disc blades with 20-inch (510-millimeter) feathering blades and extra-wide scrapers to prevent soil buildup. The unique disc gang design allows settings of 10, 15 or 20 degrees in just minutes to vary surface residue retention, and easy leveling for smooth results in all types of soil and cover conditions.

The 37- by 3-inch (940- by 8-millimeter) parabolic shanks with replaceable points on both "DR" models are protected by 3,100-pound (1,400-kilogram) auto-reset coil springs. Infinite shank spacings are possible on the DR8500, while the DR8700 is available with 24- or 30-inch (610- and 76-millimeter) shank spacings. The SS7600 features unique 32- by 2-inch (810- by 50-millimeter) dual-cushion or rigid shear-bolt shanks and 15- by 2-inch (380- by 50-millimeter) reversible ground spikes.

"Glencoe Disc Rippers let you disc topsoil and deep-till compaction zones in just one pass," reports Tony Solon, Glencoe general marketing manager. "The shanks will slice through compaction zones while retaining a firm base. And the disc gangs can be adjusted in just minutes to cut and mix soil and residue to your precise conservation needs. Another great feature for anyone practicing minimum tillage farming is the way Glencoe disc rippers can be easily leveled to produce smoother seedbeds without the edge ridges and trenches common with competitive implements."

McAuliffe Joins Pioneer Hi-Bred As District Sales Manager

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — David McAuliffe recently joined Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., as a district sales manager for the company's eastern sales region. He will work with 12 sales agencies and an agronomist to provide seed, chemical products and agricultural services to growers in parts of New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland.

Most recently, McAuliffe worked as technical director for GATE LLC in Deerfield Beach, Fla., developing and marketing components to improve the performance of application equipment for agricultural and industrial uses. Also, he spent 16 years with DuPont Crop Protection, the parent company of Pioneer.

"We are excited to welcome David back within the ranks of DuPont in our Pioneer organization and look forward to his perspective and leadership with our eastern sales team," says Fritz Schumann, area sales manager for the eastern sales region.

McAuliffe earned his bachelor's degree from Rutgers University and a master's and doctorate in weed science from Oregon State University.

He and his family will relocate from Florida to Forest Hill, Md., in the near future.

AGRICULTURE THE GRAIN OF OUR ECONOMY

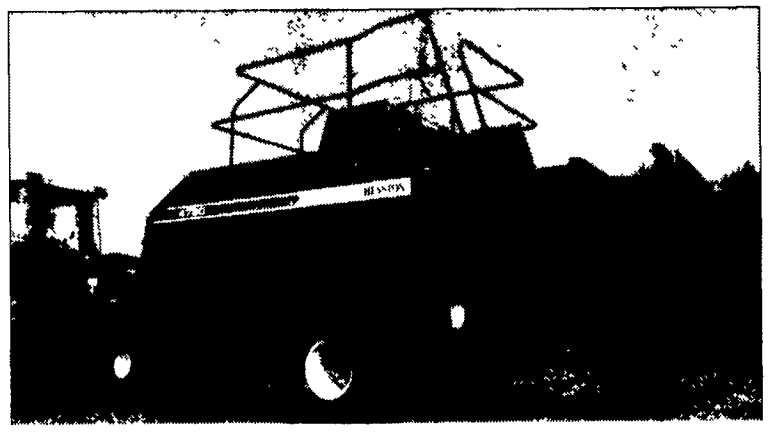
Hesston Introduces Second-Generation 4760 Large Rectangular Baler

ATLANTA, Ga. — The new 4760 baler continues Hesston's leadership in big balers with enhanced technology, performance, servicing ease and durability in the 3- by 3-foot bale category.

"Since 1978, with the introduction of the legendary 4800 model," reports Eric Raby, Hesston general marketing manager, "product improvement and enhanced performance have been the driving advantage of the Hesston product line. With the introduction of the 4760, we've taken productivity and value to a new level."

Designed for 90° horsepower tractors with 1000 rpm PTO and two double-acting hydraulic remotes, the 4760 produces bales that are 31.5 inches (800 millimeters) wide by 34.4 inches (875 millimeters) high by up to 98 inches (2,500 millimeters) long. Effective windrow pickup is 77 inches (1,970 millimeters).

The proven Hesston in-line design moves the crop in a straight line from the pickup to the bale chute. From the wide, low-profile pickup, centering augers gently feed the crop directly into a pre-packer chamber where packer fingers form it into a complete bale flake. Only when the flake has reached the pre-selected size and density is it moved into the bale chamber for final compression. This ensures consistent bale density regardless of crop conditions or ground speed.



New heavy-duty Hesston® 4760 baler.

A microprocessor-based electronic monitoring system with tractor-mounted control displays all baler functions and lets the operator make on-the-go adjustments of bale density and accumulator.

Hesston's unique double-knotter system ties two knots per bale in each of the four twines to ensure that bale density doesn't affect twine tension. Twine capacity has been increased to 20 balls and the twine box is protected against dust and moisture. In addition the knotter blower is more enclosed for better performance and improved overall baler styling.

"The first thing you will notice about the 4760 is its distinctive new styling," says Raby. "This new styling not only looks great, it's also functional, offering better baler serviceability and less crop buildup under the shields. This, combined with all the additional strength and features of the 4760, make it ideal for dry hay or silage. It can go from producing 1,000-pound (450-kilogram) dry bales to 1,500-pound (680-kilogram) silage bales without any modification."

Popular accessories for the 4760 baler include the model 4720 bale accumulator for collecting one to five dry or high-moisture bales, bale ejectors for emptying the entire bale chamber or just the end bale, standard or roller bale chutes, and hay preservative applicators.

Dairyland Seed Introduces 'Hi D.F.' Silage Hybrids

WEST BEND, Wis. — Dairyland Seed is offering producers silage hybrids bred specifically for nutritional value and yield. Trademarked Hi D.F. (highly digestible forages), these silage hybrids can significantly improve corn silage performance, both in the field and in the feed bunker.

Hi D.F. hybrids have been identified by Dairyland Seed researchers as having improved digestibility relative to standard hybrids. In addition to yield potential, in many instances these hybrids possess a soft kernel trait. This trait provides for more digestibility of the kernel, providing a better feed value.

Kernel density studies at Iowa State University have shown a clear distinction in kernel density between Hi D.F. hybrids and some other standard hybrids. Research by University of Wisconsin scientists Dr. Joe Lauer and Dr. Randy Schaver indicates soft kernel hybrids have more surface area available for digestive enzymes to utilize the starches and carbohydrates in the grain.

Several Dairyland Seed Hi D.F. silage hybrids have shown superior digestibility or superior milk per ton in university trials. Stealth 1297 has recorded outstanding results in both University of Wisconsin and Michigan State University silage trials.

One of the most important aspects of harvesting high quality silage is harvest timing. Most Hi D.F. hybrids feature a longer grain filling period, allowing producers to optimize the feed value of the hybrid they harvest.

Fundamental to all Hi D.F. silage hybrids is a strong genetics package. There's no need to sacrifice competitive grain yields to capture a specific hybrid feature. With Hi D.F. hybrids from Dairyland Seed, producers get both.

John Deere Introduces GreenStar® AutoTrac

LENEXA, Kan. — Farmers spend countless hours in the seat of a tractor, and make thousands of adjustments while steering to keep the tractor in the row and moving in a straight line. Imagine how much easier it would be to operate if the tractor could steer itself when heading down the field.

This is now a reality with the introduction of the GreenStar AutoTrac assisted steering system. John Deere has developed a user-friendly tracking system that greatly reduces the amount of time an operator needs to spend steering the tractor.

Based on the Parallel Tracking platform introduced last year and designed exclusively for John Deere equipment, AutoTrac uses the StarFire™ position receiver and dual frequency differential corrections to accurately steer the tractor down the field. After setting the initial pass (Track O), an operator simply presses a button on the CommandARTM™ and AutoTrac will steer the tractor.

"The operator must still turn at the end of each pass and around any obstacles in the field," says Steve Robisky, product manager, John Deere AMS. "But the effort to steer the tractor in a straight-line is virtually eliminated."

AutoTrac also helps to maximize tillage by better utilizing the full implement width. This also reduces fuel consumption and allows for faster field speeds. Because the operator is less fatigued and less busy with steering, he or she has greater awareness of machine functions and has a more comfortable working environment.

Other features of the new AutoTrac system include shift track that allows an operator to move the position of the "track" to the right or left in small increments, about an inch. It also allows the operator to match the location of the "track" to the vehicle with a press of the button on the GreenStar display. This greatly reduces setup time in the field and increases the accuracy of field operation.

"GreenStar AutoTrac uses satellite technology for differential correction and is a very cost-effective system that eliminates the need for base stations," explains Robisky. "Unlike the Real-Time Kinematic (RTK) systems currently on the market, AutoTrac has an unlimited coverage area because of the worldwide StarFire network. It is not limited by line-of-sight visibility from a base station."

AutoTrac is exclusively designed for John Deere equipment and is available for 8000 Ten Series Track and 900C Series Track tractors on a limited-build basis only. Full availability of GreenStar AutoTrac for all current track tractor models will be August 2002. Future releases of AutoTrac will be available on John Deere wheeled vehicles as well.

Dairyland Seed Announces New Corn Releases

WEST BEND, Wis. — Dairyland Seed recently announced the release of 18 new corn hybrids for the 2002 planting season. Each of these varieties can be seen at research tours and field days through the Midwest this fall.

Descriptions of new products for this area include:

• 73 Day Stealth-1273: A true 73-day hybrid, this is a flint cross of a flint inbred with a dent inbred. The resulting hybrid conveys excellent cold emergence, very early flowering and very early black layer. It also features high test weight. This hybrid has been specifically released due to its adaptation to the very northern edge of the Corn Belt growing range where the growing season can be cut short either due to late spring or early frost.

• 79 Day Stealth-1279: This hybrid features all around superior agronomics. Had very solid field scores in the fall of 2000 when many hybrids deteriorated. This hybrid is quick to black layer and also has fast drydown after black layer. A farm-friendly, white cob hybrid.

• 83 Day Stealth-1483/RR: This is not only our earliest Roundup Ready® hybrid, it is also a hybrid that features strong yields and a flint dent combination. Thanks to its flint heritage, this hybrid features continuous development throughout the growing season which allows it to make grain in cooler growing seasons and in the northern reaches of the corn growing area thanks to its early flowering and early black layer traits. Also features high test weight.

• 87 Day Stealth-1287/RR: This Roundup Ready® hybrid features excellent emergence and early vigor. It also features extremely fast drydown after black layer. A consistently high yielding hybrid, we're very pleased to add this hybrid to our lineup for 2002.

• 89 Day Stealth-1089: This hybrid shows very strong yields and adapts well to northern environments. Also adapts to a wide range of soils types. For best results, we recommend this hybrid be planted under good management fertility programs and higher plant populations.

• 89 Day Stealth-1089/RR: Stealth-1089/RR is a Roundup Ready® version of our high yielding Stealth-1089 hybrid. You can anticipate comparable yields and moisture with this Roundup Ready® version when compared to the original, conventional hybrid.

• 91 Day Stealth-1592: A race horse hybrid which shows peak performance under good management and fertility programs. Is adapted to a wide range of environments and management practices. Performs particularly well at high plant populations.

• 94 Day Stealth-1494/RR: This Roundup Ready® corn hybrid features superior standability and excellent yields. This short-statured hybrid loves high plant populations and kicks out excellent yields.

• 98 Day Stealth-1598: Outstanding yields on this large, robust plant type. Its open husk helps deliver excellent drydown. Has very good early season vigor and excellent eye appeal. A "must try" hybrid if you plant this maturity. Could be the highest yielding hybrid on your farm next year.

• 99/96 Day Stealth-1099/RRBt: This stacked trait hybrid carries the YieldGard trait for resistance to corn borer. It is also a Roundup Ready® hybrid. Has a wide area of adaptation with very girthy ears and excellent fall appearance.

• 99/96 Day Stealth-1199/RR: This Roundup Ready® corn hybrid shows high yield potential with rapid drydown. Stealth-1199/RR carries an excellent all-around package as it features excellent roots and stalks in addition to good grain quality.

• 103/101 Day Stealth-1503: Features tremendous yield kick as it is a somewhat lighter, improved version of Stealth-1401 with the added feature of complete kernel fill all the way to the tip of the ear. This hybrid also features excellent fall health. Contains superior stalks and roots. A shorter statured hybrid that loves higher plant populations.

• 105/102 Day Stealth-1005Bt: This YieldGard hybrid is adapted to a wide range of environmental management practices. A very clean, attractive shorter hybrid with very high yield potential. Excellent early season growth with very attractive fall appearance in part thanks to its good gray leaf spot tolerance.

• 105/102 Day New Stealth-1105/RR: The Roundup Ready trait is featured in this large, robust plant type. This hybrid also features open husks with fast drydown. Features good gray leaf spot tolerance.

• 105/102 Day Stealth-1605: Tremendous yield potential present in this hybrid. Features very good gray leaf spot tolerance as well as very fast drydown. We believe this will be a breakthrough hybrid and everyone who can use this maturity, should plant this product.

• 107/104 Day Stealth-1607: This hybrid features excellent yield potential for its maturity. Shows excellent yields in 2000 — even where stalk rot was present. Hybrid features blocky, girthy ears and has very wide adaptability.

• 109/106 Day Stealth-1507Bt: A YieldGard version of Stealth-1507, this 109-day hybrid shows very high yield potential with excellent late season plant intactness. Not only does this hybrid feature excellent stalks, but also features excellent roots, which can be a rarity for a Bt hybrid.

• 113/110 Day Stealth-1512: This hybrid has shown excellent yield potential in the presence of gray leaf spot as well as in less than ideal growing conditions. Features tremendous consistency year-in and year-out regardless of weather patterns.

Case IH Offers New Forage Harvesting Equipment

RACINE, Wis. — Case IH introduces its largest forage harvester offering available through the Case IH dealer network. The FHX300 forage harvester can be equipped with a three-row corn head or a choice of two hay headers to meet the needs of large-volume forage producers.

"Livestock producers and large, commercial hay and forage growers will benefit from this machine," says Patrick Carter, Case IH product marketing manager for hay and forage. "Our dealers can now offer customers a forage harvester with the capacity of the proven Case IH 600 blower."

The FHX300 works at optimal levels with Case IH MX Series Magnum and STX Series Steiger tractors.

The popular Case IH 600 forage blower will continue to be sold, complementing the FHX300. "The 600 has been a leading blower in the industry for some year," says Carter. "For farmers who have upright silos, this blower is their best choice on the market."

Forestry For Small Properties

By Harry Blanchet
Forest County
Cooperative Extension Director

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The average size of privately owned forestlands is shrinking in Pennsylvania and across the nation. This trend has important implications in Penn Woods because over 70 percent of the state's forestland is in the hands of private landowners. The decisions that private citizens make about their forestlands affect the benefits that forests provide all of us, including water quality, wildlife habitat, timber and other forest products, scenic beauty, recreation opportunities, and carbon storage.

While many people consider forestry as a set of practices that only occurs on large tracts of mature forest, forestry can include activities on any size wooded area. Forestry even occurs on sites without large trees, such as when small trees are planted, protected, or encouraged to grow.

Owners of relatively small tracts of land may practice forestry without realizing it. They may call it something else, but forestry involves many aspects of managing woodlands, including managing for scenic values, developing a pond, improving wildlife habitat, maintaining wetlands, deciding which trees to leave or harvest, growing understory crops, and similar practices.

People often fail to see the many opportunities that small woodlands provide for generating income, recreation, and enjoyment. Taxes and other economic factors sometimes lead small woodland owners to sell or convert their forestland to other uses. However, even small woodlands can be economically productive. Trees can furnish timber and a variety of other products including firewood, pulpwood, charcoal, and decorative wood. Some forest owners market incidental products from their woodlands, including cones, seeds, berries, nuts, herbs, flowers, bark, and lichens. While other owners may purposefully manage their forests to produce mushrooms or herbal or medicinal plants. Certain woodlands have the capacity to produce maple syrup, honey, or recreation and access services, such as hunting preserves, summer camps, duck blind rentals, campgrounds, and nature trails.

An important first step in any forestry enterprise is to gather information about the potential activity, your woodland, and your skills and interests. Natural resource professionals can help you develop a forest management plan, which will assist you in protecting forest resources and achieving your objectives, whether they are to improve wildlife habitat, enhance recreation opportunities, generate income, or other goals.

The Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program has recently revised Forest Stewardship Bulletin #11: Earning Income from Your Forestland. Call 1-800-235-WISE (toll free) or contact your county Cooperative Extension office to request a free copy.

The Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program — sponsored by the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry and USDA Forest Service in partnership with The Pennsylvania State University — provides private forestland owners with information and assistance to promote healthy and productive forests.

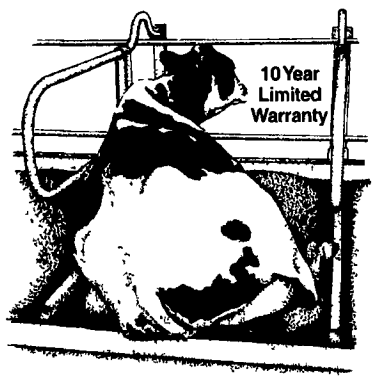
Waterbeds for Cows



The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

"The biggest benefit is the labor savings."

"In my previous barn, I scraped two times a day, and I was tired of it, not to mention the danger to the cows if a cable snapped. I thought I would not be able to justify the additional cost until my builder suggested a design change which brought the cost down relatively close to the original design.

The biggest benefit to me is the labor savings. Two people can handle all the chores for our herd. I save money not only on labor but also on repairs.

The cows' hooves are healthier, and they show heat better because they are not afraid of slipping. During the five years with slats, I have not lost a single heifer from slipping. The cows stay much cleaner, even with my misting system for cooling them. The water has a place to escape."

- Raymond Good
Good's Dairy Farm

"My only regret is that I wish I had made the pit under the barn deeper."

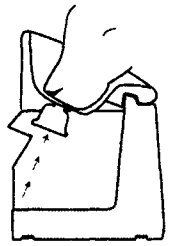
The JUG Livestock Waterer cleans itself - so you don't have to!



The JUG's Feed-Trap catches debris and keeps it out of the reservoir.

JUG Model 202 1-hole and 4-hole models also available

The JUG'S self-cleaning design

The JUG'S Feed-Trap™ design prevents feed and other debris from entering the reservoir tank Each time the animal drinks, any debris in the Feed-Trap is removed The tank stays clean!

No Algae - No slime

Since the JUG s reservoir is light-tight, no algae will grow in it. That means no slime build-up

Clean Water = productivity

You know that animals will drink more when the water is clean And more water consumption yields more productivity

Tough, long-lasting construction

The JUG is made of tough, roto-molded plastic It stands up to abuse dished out by livestock It won't chip and pit like concrete

At Last... Your Most Effective Manure Pit Management Tool!

MANURE PIT LIQUEFIER

The management of livestock manure pits has become one of the most controversial and contentious problems facing livestock growers today.
Now, there is an answer, Manure Pit Liquefier will respond to the challenges faced by livestock producers by.

- Eliminating Odor
- Raise Nutrient Values
- Increase Nutrient Availability
- Promote Pit Pumpability

Manure Pit Liquefier works three ways:

- It establishes the mechanisms which eliminate odor.
- It establishes the mechanisms by which those compounds can be converted into innocuous, odorless by-products of metabolic respiration, such as, carbon dioxide and water.
- It converts nutrients to more available formulations

Gatorshield® Galvanized Steel Tubing

The Choice is Black and White

Gatorshield galvanized steel tubing is designed specifically for the high degree of strength and corrosion resistance required by a dairy operation. At a minimum of 50,000 psi yield and 55,000 psi tensile strength Gatorshield tubing is at least 25% stronger than any competitive product. The unique, triple layer galvanizing provided by the Flo-Coat® process insures that your free stalls, gates and self-locking panels remain free from rust 5 to 10 times longer than a painted steel product.

And, the Gatorshield coating not only creates a formidable barrier between the steel and the environment, it also provides an easy-to-fabricate surface that can be readily welded, bent, flattened or powder coated — without any deformation of the coating.

Lancaster Farming: The Farmer's 'Desk' Resource To Business Opportunities

Lancaster Farming is the leading Northeast and Mid-Atlantic farm newspaper. Every Saturday, the newspaper delivers news, market and commodity reports, and agribusiness information to about 50,000 farmers in Pennsylvania and surrounding states.

The premier site for news about 4-H, FFA, and fair events, Lancaster Farming reaches many ag industries, including dairy, beef, swine, sheep, goat, horse, and specialty animal buyers and sellers.

The farm newspaper includes four basic sections each week. Section A is devoted to breaking news, dairy and beef news, commodity market reports, and upcoming events. Section B, the family section, includes mailbox markets, a special antiques center, recipes, and food and nutritional information for the entire family.

Sections C and D, the agribusiness center of the paper, include business news, new product information and updates, herd reports, classified news, and other information pertinent to farmers.

Special sections make up various issues of the paper. They include Corn Talk, the newsletter of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association; Foraging Around, the newsletter of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grasslands Council; and Grower & Marketer, news and information valuable to the farm market manager, produce and fruit grower, and horticulturist.

Additionally, special books appear at different times of the year. Exclusive to Lancaster Farming, the guides include animal health and housing information and a farmer-to-business ag directory.

A yearly subscription is $34. Call for subscription rates or to advertise at (717) 626-1164 or (717) 394-3047. Lancaster Farming has a Website, www.lancasterfarming.com, with a wide array of online services. Our e-mail is farming@lancasterfarming.com.

Zimmerman's Custom Semen Collecting

BRIEF HISTORY: Harry and Deb Zimmerman have been collecting semen as Zimmerman's Custom Freezing since 1983. We are registered with the National Association of Animal Breeders, STUD CODE No. 120. We travel and work in a mobile unit equipped with a lab and living quarters. Our only needs at your farm are a 110V plug in and water hose.

QUALITY: We can assure you of the highest quality procedures during collection and processing.

COST & PAYMENT: At the present time the cost is $1.45 per unit or straw and is payable at the time of delivery of frozen product. We do also charge mileage. However, we do try to coordinate our trips with other breeders so the cost is shared.

The goal of our business is to provide you, the breeder, with a quality product at a reasonable cost. We strive to give this service with the least disruption on the farm operator's daily activities and keep the stress level of the animals as low as possible.
